These legislative changes only give effect to an old practice as can be seen from the case noted below. (51) Where a prior mortgagee sues on his mortgage without impleading the puisne mortgagee and purchases the property in execution of the decree in such suit and enfers into possession he is liable to account for the rents and profits of the property and in a suit by the puisne mortgagee on the puisne mortgage, such rents and profits must be credited in reduction of the amount payable to the prior mortgagee. 20. A person cannot be both a plaintiff and a defendant.—Suppose, A and B are first mortgagees and A and C are the puisne mortgagees of a property. In a suit by A and B for foreclosure of their mortgage, C alone can be joined as defendant as a puisne mortgagee, because A cannot be both plaintiff and defendant in the same suit. (1) The same person cannot be both plaintiff and defendant in a suit even in 'different capacities.' (2)

21. Joinder of parties.—A misjoinder of plaintiff in a mortgage suit, some of whom are not entitled to any relief, is a mere defect of form and is not fatal to the suit. (1) This rule does not 'prohibit' the joinder of any person (2) whom it is proper to add under the provisions of O.1 Rr. 1 and 3, Civil Procedure Code. Where, after the commencement of the trial of the suit, an application is made to the Court for adding persons alleged to be interested in the subject-matter of the suit, the matter is in the discretion of the Court; it may, in a proper case, decline under O. 1 R. 10, Civil Procedure Code, to add the parties sought to be impleaded. (3) As to the effect of joining new parties after the period of limitation, see the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Limitation Act, 2nd (1942) Edition, S.22.

1. Legislative Changes.— The rule has been extensively amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act (XXI of 1929). The old rule ran as follows:

"2. In a suit for foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the plaintiff for principal and interest on the mortgage, and for the costs of the suit (if any) awarded to him on the day next hereinafter referred to, or

(b) declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree, and directing—

(c) that if the defendant pays into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due to be fixed by the Court, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant, or to such person as he appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall, if so required, re-transfer the property to the defendant free from the mortgage and from all encumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him, or, where the plaintiff claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims, and shall also, if necessary, put the defendant in possession of the property, but

(d) that if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court, the defendant shall be debarred from all right to redeem the property."

The following important changes may be noted :

(1) The present rule makes it clear that the decree under it is a 'preliminary' decree.(1).

(2) Under the old rule it was not clear, when accounts were directed to be taken whether they were to be taken up to the date of declaring in Court the amount due, or up to the date fixed for payment. It is now provided that the accounts are to be taken up to the date of the preliminary decree.

(3) The provision as to other costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage security, is new.

(4) The new rule makes it clear as to when the period fixed for payment commences to run.

(5) The provision in sub-rule (1) (c) (i) relating to subsequent costs and subsequent interest is new.

(6) The same sub-rule makes it clear that the re-transfer is to be at the mortgagor's cost.

(7) Under the same sub-rule the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree on default by the mortgagor.

(8) The provision as to the Court's power to extend time which was contained in the proviso to sub-rule (2) in the old Rule 3 has been enacted as sub-rule (2) of this rule.

(9) Sub-rule (3) makes express provision for the form of decree in cases where subsequent mortgagees are made parties.

2. Analogous law—Transfer of Property Act, Section 86.—This rule corresponds to S. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act; that section was as follows:

"86. In a suit for foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall make a decree, ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the plaintiff for principal and interest on the mortgage, and for his costs of the suit, if any, awarded to him, on the day next hereinafter referred to, or declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree, and ordering that, upon the defendant paying to the plaintiff or into Court the amount so due, on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due, to be fixed by the Court, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant, or to such person as he appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall transfer the property to the defendant free from all encumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him, or, where the plaintiff claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims; and shall, if necessary, put the defendant into possession of the property; but that, if the payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court, the defendant shall be absolutely debarred of all right to redeem the property."

The following differences may be noted—

(1) Under R. 2 payment has to be made in all cases into the Court while under S. 86 payment could be made to the plaintiff or into the Court.

(2) The words "if so required" have been added to sub-rule (1) (c) (i) as it was found that in the mofussil Courts it was not the practice for the mortgagee to execute a re-conveyance of the property to the mortgagor.

Order 34 Rule 2—Note 1

1 ('23) 10 AIR 1923 Bom 420 (421) (DB). (Where the opinion was expressed under the old rule that the point should be made clear by amendment.)

3. Scope and object of the rule.—The scheme and object of this rule is "that a general account should be taken once for all, and an aggregate amount be stated in the decree for principal, interest and costs due on a fixed day and that after the expiration of that day, if the property be not redeemed, the matter shall pass from the domain of contract to that of judgment and the rights of the mortgagee should thenceforth depend not on the contents of the bond but on the directions in the decree."(1)

The object of this rule is to prevent mortgagees from realizing their securities otherwise than in the mode prescribed by the rule.(2)

As to the applicability of the rule to cases under the Bengal Land Redemption and Foreclosure Regulation, XVII of 1806, see the case noted below.(3) See also the undermentioned case.(4)

4. Persons entitled to the right of foreclosure.—Under S. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act, as it existed before it was amended by Act XX of 1929, the remedy by way of foreclosure was available only in the case of—

(1) a mortgage by conditional sale,

(2) an English mortgage, and

(3) an equitable mortgage by deposit of title deeds in Bombay.(1)

The newly amended S. 67 now provides that no mortgagee "other than a mortgagee by conditional sale or a mortgagee under an anomalous mortgage by the terms of which he is entitled to foreclose," can institute a suit for foreclosure.(2) It follows that neither a mortgagee under an English mortgage, nor an equitable mortgagee by deposit of title deeds in Bombay, can sue for foreclosure. Their remedy is only to sue for sale. By S. 15 of the amending Act XXI of 1929, however, the remedy of the equitable mortgagee in Bombay to proceed by way of foreclosure was kept open till 1st April 1932.

The characteristic of a foreclosure decree is that it completely extinguishes the mortgagor's right to redeem and thereafter makes the mortgagee owner of the property. A mortgagee who has obtained a preliminary decree for foreclosure is entitled to apply for setting aside an execution sale under O. 21 R. 90, Civil Procedure Code, on the ground of material irregularity.(3)

5. Form of preliminary decree.—In a preliminary decree for foreclosure, the Court cannot, except with the consent of parties, direct payment of the mortgage-money by instalments.(1) But, where a preliminary decree allowing payment by instalments is passed by 'consent' of parties, it does not necessarily fall outside the scope of R. 2; the provisions of Rr. 2 and 3 may still apply to such a decree.(2) A preliminary decree for foreclosure which does not conform to the form prescribed by this rule is irregular, but after it is made absolute, the defendant cannot object to delivery of possession under the decree to the decree-holder.(3)

The parties to a mortgage can contract themselves out of the provisions of Rr. 2 and 3 and agree to have a decree passed in such terms as to make it operate as a final decree automatically or that in default of payment by a stipulated date the decree shall operate as a final decree for foreclosure.(4) (See also O. 34 R. 4, Note 15. and O. 34 R 5, Note 5.)

See also Appendix D, Form Nos. 3, 3A, 9 and 10.

6. "Ordering that an account be taken."—The amount (whether accounts are directed to be taken or not) is to be calculated 'up to the date of the preliminary decree'. The object of the rule is that a general account should be taken of 'all' the amounts due between the parties once for all and that the aggregate amount should be declared as due to the plaintiff on payment of which the property is to be redeemed.(1) The accounts have to be taken 'before' the final decree; they cannot be directed to be taken 'in execution' of the final decree.(2) In the taking of such accounts, not only sums due by the mortgagor but also those due by the mortgagee should be taken into consideration.(3) If the decree is silent as to the person selected to take the accounts, the parties may themselves select a person to do so and his award will be binding on them.(4) The accounting is, however, to be restricted to the 'mortgage transaction' in question in the suit and should not be extended to other transactions between the parties.(5) For other cases on this topic, see the undermentioned decisions.(6)

7. Principal.—The onus of proving the amount due to him is initially on the mortgagee. Hence, if the mortgage deed is not properly stamped and the mortgagee refuses to pay the stamp duty and penalty with the result that the mortgage deed is inadmissible in evidence, the mortgagee cannot recover anything beyond what the mortgagor 'admits' to be due.(1)

The statement in the mortgage deed is 'prima facie' proof of the amount due.(2) But the mortgagor can plead a total or partial discharge of the debt or that the recital as to consideration in the bond is wholly or partially untrue.(3) But in such a case the burden will be upon him to substantiate his allegations.

It is not for the mortgagee to prove that the consideration stated in the bond was actually paid by him.(4) But recitals in deeds are not evidence against 'third parties'.(5)

Where only part of the alleged consideration is proved to have been paid, the mortgage is valid to the extent of the part so paid.(6) Similarly, in the case of a mortgage of property belonging to a Hindu joint family, where it is proved that only a part of the consideration was supported by legal necessity, the mortgage is valid and binding to that extent.(7)

8. Interest.—By Act XXI of 1929, a new rule (R. 11) has been enacted which deals specially with the power of the Court to order payment of interest in mortgage suits. See the Notes on that rule for full information on the subject. According to S. 58 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act, "Mortgage-money" includes interest on the principal secured by the mortgage. This principal is recognized by the present rule which 'inter alia' makes the payment of the interest, provided in the mortgage deed, a condition of redemption. In the absence of anything to the contrary in the mortgage deed,(1) interest as well as the principal constitutes a charge on the property.(2)

9. Interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment.—Before the amendment of the rule by Act XXI of 1929 there was no provision either in R. 2 or R. 3 for the payment of interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment. Hence, there was a lack of uniformity in the decisions on the question.(1) Express provision has now been made for the inclusion, in the preliminary decree for foreclosure, of a direction for the payment of "subsequent interest" up to the date of actual payment. For fuller information on the subject, see Note 2 on Rule 11.

11. Costs of the suit.—The general rule in all suits relating to mortgages is that the mortgagee is entitled to his costs. But it is within the power of the Court, in view of the mortgagee's conduct and the peculiar circumstances of any case, to refuse to award him any costs.(1) Ordinarily costs awarded against a mortgagor are part of the mortgage-money, and are recoverable from out of the mortgaged property.(2) But the Court can, in the exercise of its discretion under S. 35, Civil Procedure Code, make such costs recoverable from the mortgagor 'personally'.(3) Where a defendant in a mortgage suit claiming title paramount to that of the mortgagor is struck off from the array of parties and is awarded costs, the mortgagor who is in no way responsible for it or the mortgaged property should not be made liable for such costs.(4)

A puisne mortgagee who is made a party to a suit on the mortgage is also entitled to his costs against the mortgagor.(5) Similarly, a co-mortgagee is also entitled to his costs even though he refused to join the plaintiff in a suit on a mortgage and was therefore joined as a defendant in the suit.(6) It has been held that costs are to be awarded to the mortgagee on the scale of costs as between attorney and client.(7) The mortgagee is also entitled to his costs incurred subsequent to the preliminary decree up to the date of payment. (See also Rule 10.)

12. Other costs, charges and expenses.—The rule as amended by Act XXI of 1929 makes express provision for payment to the mortgagee of all expenses properly incurred by him in respect of the mortgage security, together with interest thereon.(1) Even prior to the Act XXI of 1929 the mortgagee was entitled in a suit on the mortgage, to claim as part of the mortgage-money, expenses properly incurred by him for the preservation of the mortgaged property, the protection of his title to the property, etc.(2) (See the Transfer of Property Act, sections 72 and 63A.) Rule 10 also provides for the payment of such expenses incurred subsequent to the preliminary decree up to the date of payment.

13. Account against mortgagee in possession.—Under S. 77 of the Transfer of Property Act a mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged properly is not liable to account for the rents and profits of the property where, under the terms of the mortgage, the mortgagee is to take rents and profits in lieu of interest or in lieu of interest and defined portions of the principal. In other cases a mortgagee in possession is liable to account for the rents and profits of the property. Under S. 76 (g) of the Transfer of Property Act he must keep clear, full and accurate accounts of all sums received and spent by him as mortgagee,(1) and is bound to deduct the rents and profits realized by him from the amount claimed by him against the mortgagor.(2) Further, he is liable to pay a reasonable occupation rent if he is personally in possession of the land.(3) He must also, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, pay the Government revenue and all charges of a public nature and all rents accruing due in respect of the property, and if owing to his default, the mortgagor has to pay any of these items of expenditure, he is entitled to a set-off in respect thereof.(4) See the Transfer of Property Act, section 76 (c).

14. Accounts in suits by or against sub-mortgagee.—A sub-mortgagee is entitled to sue for sale or foreclosure to the same extent as the original mortgagee himself.(1) Where a sub-mortgagee is a party to a suit on the mortgage, the proper course is to direct accounts to be taken, both of the amounts due to the original mortgagee and of the amounts due to the sub-mortgagee and to order that, out of the sum due to the original mortgagee, the sub-mortgagee should be paid the amount due to him on his mortgage, that the balance should be paid to the original mortgagee and that, thereafter, both the mortgagees should re-convey to the mortgagor the mortgaged property.(2) See also Appendix D, Form No. 11 and Notes on Rule 1.

15. Subsequent mortgagees.—The form of the preliminary decree given in the present rule should be adapted to the circumstances of each case. Where puisne mortgagees are impleaded as parties in a suit on a prior mortgage, a form similar to the one in use in the Chancery Division in the High Court in England may be found useful.(1) (See also Appendix D, Form Nos. 9 to 11.) The chief point to be noted in such cases is to give effect to the principle "redeem up, and foreclose down." The first right of redemption belongs to the next puisne mortgagee. If he makes default, he is foreclosed and the right to redeem devolves on the next puisne mortgagee and in the event of his default, the right belongs to the next mortgagee and the process goes on until the mortgagor is reached. If the mortgagor also fails to redeem he will be foreclosed.(2)

A subsequent mortgagee who has been added as a party to a suit for foreclosure by a prior mortgagee and who pays off the decree amount can, on his being transposed as plaintiff, apply for a final decree.(3)

16. "Pays into Court."—Under S. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act the defendant could pay the mortgage-money under the preliminary decree to the 'mortgagee' plaintiff direct or into the 'Court.'(1) But the present rule requires the payment to be made only 'into the Court' in all cases.(2) As to when and how far a payment made 'out of Court' can be recognized by the Court dealing with an application to pass a final decree, see Note 14 on Rule 5.

17. "On or before such date as the court may fix within six months." —The rule only fixes the outer limit for the period to be fixed for the payment of the mortgage-money under the preliminary decree. The Court has a discretion to fix any shorter period it thinks fit.(1) Where accounts are directed to be taken, the period of six months should be calculated not from the date of the preliminary decree, but from the date on which the Court confirms and countersigns the accounts taken under its decree.(2) (See sub-r. (1) cl. (c) sub-cl. (i).) As to the question whether, when the preliminary decree is appealed against, the period fixed for payment runs from the date of the first Court's decree or from the date of the appellate decree, see Note 5 on R. 3.

It is open to the parties to agree that the decretal amount shall be payable by the judgment-debtor by instalments extending over a much longer period than the period of six months laid down in this rule.(2a).

See also the undermentioned case(3) under the Co-operative Societies Act of 1912.

18. Extension of time.—Sub-rule (2) of this rule which corresponds to the proviso to the old sub-r. (2) of R. 3 empowers the Court, on good cause being shown, to extend the time fixed for payment of the mortgage-money under the preliminary decree(1). But the mortgagor is not entitled to an extension of time 'as of right'.(2) The rule provides that extension of time may be granted "on good cause shown." The Court has no power to grant an extension of time where no good cause has been shown for such extension.(3) As to what constitutes "good cause," see the undermentioned cases.(4) Time may be extended even after the expiry of the period originally fixed(5) provided a 'final decree' has not been passed.(6) As the right to redeem continues until the final decree is actually passed, the mortgagor may pay in the money at any time before the final decree is passed though there may not be an 'express' order extending the period.(7) This is made clear now by the substitution of the words "before a final decree has been passed" at the beginning of R. 3 in place of the words "on or before the day fixed" which occurred in the old rule. Even where a preliminary decree is passed by consent of parties, the Court can exercise its power of extending the period fixed for payment.(8) See also the undermentioned decisions.(9)

An express application for extention of time is not necessary.(10) Nor need the application where one is made, be in 'writing.'(11) But the Court cannot postpone the passing of a final decree, on the application of a 'third party.'(12)

19. Plaintiff to apply for final decree.—The rule [sub-rule (1) (c) sub-cl (ii)] makes it clear that the 'plaintiff' has to apply for a final decree for foreclosure if the defendant fails to pay mortgage-money within the time fixed by the Court. In one case it was contended that a final decree passed on the application of the 'transferee' from the mortgagee was not binding on the mortgagor.

1. Transfer of Property Act, Section 87.—This rule corresponds to S. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act which ran as follows:

"87. If payment is made of such amount and of such subsequent costs as are mentioned in S. 94, the defendant shall (if necessary) be put into possession of the mortgaged property.

If such payment is not so made, the plaintiff may apply to the Court for an order that the defendant and all persons claiming through or under him be debarred absolutely of all right to redeem the mortgaged property, and the Court shall then pass such order, and may, if necessary, deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff:

Provided that the Court may, upon good cause shown, and upon such terms, if any, as it thinks fit, from time to time postpone the day appointed for such payment.

On the passing of an order under the second paragraph of this section the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged.

In the Code of Civil Procedure, Sch. IV, No. 129, for the words "Final decree," the words "Decree absolute" shall be substituted."

The following differences may be noted—

(1) The present rule provides for the 'passing of a decree' when the defendant pays up the mortgage-money within the time allowed. But S. 87 merely provided that, in such a case, the defendant should, if necessary, be put in possession of the mortgaged property.

(2) Under the present rule, if the defendant does not pay the mortgage-money within the time allowed, a 'final decree' is passed. But under section 87 the procedure was to pass an 'order' absolute for foreclosure.

2. Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act XXI of 1929.—The present rule has been amended by Act XXI of 1929. The chief points of distinction between the old rule and the new rule are—

(1) The words "before a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed" have been substituted for the words "on or before the day fixed."

(2) Under the amended rule, the defendant mortgagor has to 'apply' to the Court for a decree in his favour if he pays the mortgage-money within the time allowed. The old rule did not require this.

(3) The new rule makes it clear that the decree to be passed under it is a 'final' decree.

(4) The proviso to sub-rule (2) of the old rule regarding to the Court's power to extend the time fixed for payment of the mortgage-money has been transferred to Rule 2.

(5) Sub-rule (3) makes it clear that the passing of a final decree for foreclosure discharges not only the mortgage debt but all liability of the defendants in respect of the mortgage or on account of the suit thereon.

3. "Where, before a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed."—The substitution of the words "before a final decree....has been passed" for the words "on or before the day fixed" now makes it clear that though a mortgagor has not paid the mortgage-money under the preliminary decree for foreclosure within the time allowed by the Court, he does not lose his right to redeem but can exercise the right till a final decree for foreclosure is actually passed.(1) In view of this the undermentioned decisions(2) prior to the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act XXI of 1929, which disclose a conflict of judicial opinions, are only of academic interest now. Where after a preliminary decree for foreclosure has been passed, the mortgagee enters into possession before the day appointed for payment has arrived and remains in possession and the mortgagor keeps quiet for a long time, the mortgagor will be held to have acquiesced in the mortgagee holding the property as his own and may thus be deprived of his right on the ground of estoppel.(3)

4. Power to enlarge time.—See Note 18 on Rule 2. Also see Note 9 on Section 148 of the A.I.R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edition.

In the following cases it was held that if the mortgagor did not pay within the time originally fixed or subsequently extended by the Court, he could not redeem the property afterwards:

5. Effect of appeal on time fixed for payment.—Order 41 R. 5 expressly provides that an appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under a decree or order appealed from, except so far as the Appellate Court may order to that effect. Hence the mere 'pendency' of an appeal from the preliminary decree does not extend the time fixed, and is no bar to the passing of a final decree(1) unless the Appellate Court expressly or by necessary implication extends the period for payment.(2) Nor is it a ground for enlarging the time fixed by the preliminary decree for payment.(3)

As to the effect of a 'decree' passed in, or 'dismissal' of, the appeal on the time fixed by the preliminary decree, see Note 9 on S. 148 of the A.I.R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edition.

6. Where payment in accordance with sub-rule (1) has not been made.—A mortgagee is not bound to accept a smaller sum than that due as part satisfaction of his decree but is entitled to insist on a final decree for foreclosure being passed in his favour where the 'whole' of the amount found due to him is not paid into the Court.(1) But this principle only applies where there is no dispute as to the sum due.(2) Thus, where the mortgagor deposits in Court the sum found due by the lower Court, but the sum is increased by the Appellate Court, the payment by the mortgagor reduces the debt 'pro tanto' and interest is payable afterwards only on the balance.(3) The mortgagee is not bound to accept payment after the passing of the final decree for foreclosure.(4)

7. Final decree for foreclosure.—The rule makes it clear that the decree to be passed under this rule is a final 'decree'. The procedure under the Transfer of Property Act was to obtain an 'order' absolute for foreclosure or sale.(1)

An application for a final decree for foreclosure should be made by the 'plaintiff,'(2) and he should make it to the Court of 'first instance' even though the preliminary decree was modified in appeal.(3) But a defendant who is present and allows a final decree to be passed on the application of a 'transferee' from the plaintiff will be estopped from questioning the validity of the decree afterwards.(4)

Prior to the amendment of rules 2 and 3 in 1929 it was held that notice to defendant was not necessary before a final decree was passed,(5) though in practice it was generally given on grounds of justice and equity.(6) Notice was, however, held necessary where the defendant happened to be a minor.(7) But the failure to give notice was held to be a mere irregularity which did not invalidate the proceedings unless the merits of the case were affected.(8)

Under the present rules as amended notice of an application for final decree for foreclosure must be given to the defendant before a final decree can be passed.(8a)

An 'ex parte' final decree can be set aside under O. 9, R. 13, Civil Procedure Code, if "sufficient cause" within the meaning of that rule is established.(9) The dismissal for default of an application for a final decree does not preclude a fresh application for the same purpose.(10)

The procedure for obtaining a final decree applies to a preliminary decree passed on compromise between the parties(11) unless the decree, by its terms, provides for execution on default without any fresh decree being passed.(12) (See also O. 34 R. 4, Note 15.). A 'conditional' decree for foreclosure is not contemplated by the rule.(13)

Where a party is entitled to Pre-emption on foreclosure, the right arises, not on the expiry of the period fixed for payment, but on the passing of the final decree for foreclosure,(14) as until then the ownership of the mortgaged property vests in the mortgagor.(15)

An omission to draw up a final decree is only an irregularity and hence where a Court erroneously passed an order absolute instead of a final decree, it was held that the order could be enforced by execution.(16) See also the undermentioned cases.(17)

8. Partial foreclosure.—The nature of the proceedings for foreclosure is such that a mortgage must be foreclosed as a whole or not at all. Thus, where a suit for foreclosure is decreed only with respect to some of the properties but dismissed with regard to others and an appeal is filed from that portion of the decree which dismisses the suit, the mortgagee cannot first obtain a final decree in respect of the portion of the decree favourable to him and then, on succeeding in the appeal as to the rest, another final decree in respect thereof.(1)

9. Discharge of debt, etc., on foreclosure.—The present rule makes it clear that on the passing of a final decree for foreclosure, not only the mortgage 'debt' but all the defendant's liabilities in respect of the mortgage as well as for the costs of the suit become discharged.(1) The mortgagor's right to redeem revives if, notwithstanding the foreclosure, the mortgagee pursues his personal remedy against the mortgagor.(2) Where a person holding several mortgages on the same property forecloses under the first mortgage, it will be inequitable to allow him to sue the mortgagor personally for the debt secured by the second mortgage.(3)

10. Delivery of title-deeds.—A mortgagor can institute a separate suit to recover compensation for loss of title-deeds; the Court may also grant, in the mortgage decree itself, an alternative relief for damages for such loss. But if no such alternative relief for damages is provided for in the preliminary and final decrees, the Court cannot grant it in execution.(1)

11. Limitation for application for final decree.—See the A.I.R. Commentaries on the Limitation Act, 2nd (1942) Edition, Article 181, Note 4.

12. Application for execution of final decree.—An application for the execution of a final decree is governed by Art. 182 of the Limitation Act.(1)

A final decree in a mortgage suit may be adjusted out of Court like any other decree and Civil Procedure Code, O. 21 R. 2 applies thereto.(2) Where a mortgage decree is time-barred, it cannot be enforced, the mortgage itself having merged in the decree.(3) Section 48, Civil Procedure Code, applies to a final decree under O. 34, though the preliminary decree, on which it was based, had been passed under the Transfer of Property Act.(4) Where in a foreclosure decree against the defendants, costs are awarded to the defendants, O. 21, R. 19, Civil Procedure Code, is no bar to their executing the decree for costs.(5) Where a foreclosure decree contains no direction for delivery of possession, the mortgagee cannot obtain possession by 'applying in execution'. The proper course is to apply for an order for 'possession'.(6)

13. Appeal.—It is clear under O. 34 that a final 'decree' is a decree and appealable as such. Even under the Transfer of Property Act, an order absolute was held to be appealable as a decree.(1)

An order dismissing an application for passing a final decree for foreclosure on ground that it is premature is an interlocutory order and not a decree and therefore is not appealable.(2) minary decree due to the plaintiff, together with such amount as may have been adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest, and the balance, if any, be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same.

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time, at any time before a final decree for sale is passed, extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub-rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest.

(4) Where, in a suit for sale or a suit for foreclosure in which sale is ordered, subsequent mortgagees or persons deriving title from, or subrogated to the rights of, any such mortgagees are joined as parties, the preliminary decree referred to in sub-rule (1) shall provide for the adjudication of the respective rights and liabilities of the parties to the suit in the manner and form set forth in Form No. 9, Form No. 10 or Form No. 11, as the case may be, of Appendix D with such variations as the circumstances of the case may require.

Order 34 Rule 4 (Calcutta)

1 ('43) 30 AIR 1943 Cal 372 (376) : ILR (1943) 2 Cal 417 (DB). (Bengal Money-Lenders Act—Preliminary decree incorporating personal decree is not satisfied until personal liability is also satisfied—Personal liability can be scaled down if the personal decree is made after 1st January 1939.)

1. Transfer of Property Act, Section 88.—This rule corresponds to S. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act which was as follows:

"88. In a suit for sale, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a decree to the effect mentioned in the first and second paragraphs of S. 86, and also ordering that, in default of the defendant paying as therein mentioned, the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is so found due to the plaintiff, and that the balance, if any, be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same.

In a suit for foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds and the mortgage is not a mortgage by conditional sale, the Court may, at the instance of the plaintiff, or of any person interested either in the mortgage-money or in the right of redemption, if it thinks fit, pass a like decree (in lieu of a decree for foreclosure) on such terms as it thinks fit, including, if it thinks fit, the deposit in Court of a reasonable sum, fixed by the Court, to meet the expenses of sale and to secure the performance of the terms."

The provision as to the payment of subsequent costs and interest to the mortgagee out of the sale proceeds of the mortgaged property is new. The present rule is not retrospective in effect so as to affect decrees already passed under the Transfer of Property Act at the time of coming into force of the new Code.(1)

2. Amendments subsequent to 1908.—The present rule has been amended extensively by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929. The material changes introduced by the amendment are as follows:

(1) The new rule makes it clear that the decree under it is a 'preliminary' decree.
(2) If the mortgagor makes default in payment, the mortgagee has to 'apply' for a final decree for sale.
(3) The rule makes it clear that the mortgagees should be paid out of the sale proceeds not only subsequent costs and interest but also 'subsequent charges and expenses properly incurred' in respect of the mortgage security.
(4) Sub-rule (2) enables the Court to 'extend the time' fixed for payment. There was no such provision in the old rule.
(5) Sub-rule (3) corresponding to sub-rule (2) of the old rule is now expressly limited to anomalous mortgages, while sub-rule (2) of the old rule applied to 'all' mortgages other than mortgages by conditional sale.
(6) Sub-rule (4) makes express provision for the adjudication of the rights of 'subsequent mortgagees' who are joined as parties to a suit by a prior mortgagee.

3. Who may obtain a decree for sale.—The right to sue for sale or foreclosure is conferred by S. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act. A decree for sale cannot be obtained by a usufructuary mortgagee as such or a mortgagee by conditional sale as such. Such a decree can be obtained only by a 'simple' mortgagee, an 'English' mortgagee, an 'equitable' mortgagee and an 'anomalous' mortgagee. See Note 4 on rule 2 and the undermentioned cases.(1) As to the rights of sub-mortgagees, see Note 9 on Rule 1.

The High Court of Madras(2) has held that a mortgagee of chattel is entitled to obtain a decree for sale in enforcement of his mortgage quite as much as a mortgagee of immovable property. See also Note 1 on Rule 1 and Note 20 on Rule 2.

4. Decree for money in suit for sale.—In a suit on a mortgage, it is open to a mortgagee to relinquish his security and to content himself with a simple money decree.(1) A mere decree for money which creates a charge on immovable property for the decretal amount(2) or which authorises the decree-holder to enforce the decree by selling certain property(3) is not a "preliminary decree" on a mortgage under this rule. But a preliminary mortgage decree passed under this rule is not a decree for money and the decree-holder cannot execute it by attachment and sale of the mortgaged property. His sole remedy is to apply for final decree (4)

5. Form of decree.—The forms in Appendix D for decrees in suits relating to mortgages have been greatly changed by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929. For the form of preliminary decrees in suits for sale, see Appendix D, Form Nos. 5 and 5A.

In framing decrees in mortgage suits the provisions contained in Order 34 should not be overlooked.(1) A preliminary decree in a mortgage suit must fix a period within which the mortgagor should pay the mortgage-money and the decree should direct a sale of the property 'only' if the mortgagor fails to pay the money within the period fixed.(2)

It will be noted that the form of a preliminary decree for sale under this rule does not contain any provision regarding the mortgagor's personal liability. Any decree which contains such a provision is in contravention of the rules which contemplate the determination of the question only when the sale proceeds of the mortgaged property are 'not sufficient' to pay off the mortgage debt.(3) Accounts between the mortgagor and the mortgagee should be taken before passing the final decree. A direction in the decree for taking accounts in 'execution' is against law.(4) A decree directing sale of the mortgaged property in default of the mortgage-money being paid within a fixed time(5) or a decree for the debt which provides that the mortgaged property shall be liable for the debt (6) is in substantial compliance with the present rule. Where a decree purporting to be a decree on a mortgage is ambiguous, it should be construed so as to accord with the law.(7) As regards the construction of mortgage decrees, see Order 34 Rule 5, Note 23 and the undermentioned case (8)

6. Contents of decree in suit for sale by first mortgagee.—For the form of a preliminary decree in a suit for sale impleading the mortgagor and a 'puisne mortgagee', see Appendix D, Form No. 9. For the form of a decree in a suit by a puisne mortgagee for redemption of a prior mortgage and for foreclosure or sale on the puisne mortgage, see Form No. 10 in Appendix D (1). The direction contained in sub-rule (4) is mandatory and makes it the duty of Court to adjudicate on the rights of the puisne mortgagee impleaded in a prior mortgagee's suit (1a). It is not necessary for the puisne mortgagee to file a substantive suit or counter-claim to get his rights ascertained (1b). In a suit on a prior mortgage in which puisne mortgagees are also impleaded as parties, each of them is entitled to an order that an account be taken of the amount due to him and to a declaration of his right to participate in the surplus sale proceeds remaining after paying off the prior mortgagee in the order of his priority.(2) But the pusine mortgagee's right is dependent on a 'sale being held under the prior mortgage'.

(Under O. 34 R.4 (4), C.P. code, subsequent mortgagee who is impleaded as a party to a suit on a prior mortgage is entitled at least to redeem the plaintiff or to receive his own mortgage money out of the surplus sale proceeds remaining after satisfaction of the plaintiff's mortgage—If they pay

Hence, where the prior mortgage is paid off before the sale under it is held, the puisne mortgagee cannot ask for a sale of the property.(3) Where the puisne mortgage includes some properties in addition to those mortgaged to the prior mortgagee, the puisne mortgagee cannot ask that, if the sale proceeds of the properties subject to the prior mortgage are not sufficient to pay off both the prior and the puisne mortgages, the additional properties subject to the puisne mortgage should also be sold. His right is only to have his mortgage debt satisfied out of the sale proceeds of the properties subject to the prior mortgage.(4) In a suit by a prior mortgagee impleading both the mortgagor and the puisne mortgagee, the mortgagor cannot be called upon to pay off both the mortgages on pain of his property being sold.(5) The puisne mortgagee's right to have his mortgage debt satisfied out of the surplus sale proceeds is not affected by such sale proceeds being withdrawn from the Court by a person having notice of the puisne mortgagee's title.(6)

7. Court's power to adjust equities.—Where a sale of the mortgaged properties is impossible, as where the mortgaged properties have been sold for arrears of revenue or rent, the decree must be suitably modified. The Court has inherent power, in such cases, to give appropriate directions for the disposal of the fund which represents the property.(1) See also Note 19 on Rule 1. Where part of the mortgaged property has been acquired by the Government under the Land Acquisition Act, the proper decree to pass will be a decree for sale of the available mortgaged property with a direction that in case the entire mortgaged debt is not realized by the sale of such property, the mortgagee shall be entitled to a simple money decree against the mortgagor for a sum not in excess of the amount withdrawn by the mortgagor as compensation money in the land acquisition proceedings.(2)

8. Power to extend time in suit for sale—Sub-rule (2).—See also Note 18 on Rule 2.

The provision in sub-r. (2) enabling the Court to extend the time fixed for payment of the mortgage-money under the preliminary decree is new. The provision is intended for the benefit of the mortgagor (1a). There was no such provision before the amendment of the present rule by Act XXI of 1929. Hence, it was held that the Court had no power to extend the period fixed for payment of the mortgage-money under a preliminary decree for sale.(1) It was, however, open to the mortgagor to prevent a sale at any time before it was actually held, by payment under the Civil Procedure Code, O. 21, R. 69.(2) Even after the sale it was open to him to have the sale set aside at any time before it was confirmed by applying under O. 21 R. 89.(3) But O. 21 R. 83 expressly provides that R. 83 does not apply to decrees on mortgages.(4)

In a suit for sale by a puisne mortgagee he was given a decree conditional on his redeeming a prior mortgage within two months from the decree. He failed to redeem the prior mortgage within the period fixed but did so about four months after the decree. It was held that as the defendant had not taken any steps to redeem, the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of the payment though made after the prescribed time and to a decree absolute for sale.(5) As to the extension of time for payment of instalments under an instalment decree passed under the Bengal Money-Lenders Act of 1940, see the under-mentioned case.(6)

9. Decree for sale in a foreclosure suit—Sub-rule (3).—Sub-rule (3) has been taken from S. 25 of the English Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881.(1) The provision occurred even in S. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act and was repeated in O. 34, R. 4, sub-r. (2) [now sub-r. (3).]

The Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929, has made a slight change in the language of the sub-rule, and it is this: The old rule applied to mortgages other than 'mortgages by conditional sale.' The new rule applies only to 'anomalous' mortgages.(2) The doubt that was felt under the old sub-rule as regards its applicability to anomalous mortgages(3) can thus no longer exist. In such cases, the Court in order to protect the interest of all parties concerned can, in the exercise of its discretion under this sub-rule, pass a decree for sale instead of one for foreclosure, although the suit may be for foreclosure.(4) But the Court will not pass a decree for sale instead of one for foreclosure under this sub-rule where it does not appear that the property was 'undervalued'.(5)

Where a plaintiff mortgagee sues for foreclosure on the allegation that the mortgage is one by conditional sale, and it is found that the mortgage is not one by conditional sale, the proper course is not to dismiss the suit but to grant relief under sub-rule(3).(6)

10. Order in which properties should be sold.—'Prima facie' the decree-holder is entitled to have the mortgaged properties sold in any order he likes.(1) There are, however, two important exceptions to this general rule, namely,—

(1) the doctrine of 'marshalling' securities as laid down in the Transfer of Property Act, and

(2) the Court's power under this rule to 'adjust the equities' between the parties.

'Doctrine of marshalling'—Section 56 of the Transfer of Property Act, as it stood before its amendment, applied only as between the 'seller' and his 'buyer'.(2) The section has now been recast by Act XX of 1929 and it is now provided that the buyer can claim the right of marshalling against not only the seller but also against the 'mortgagee,' but not so as to prejudice his rights. Similarly, the old S. 81 of the Transfer of Property Act provided for marshalling where there were two properties only. The scope of that section has now been widened by Act XX of 1929 by providing that the section should apply to cases where there are 'more than two' properties and to 'all' subsequent mortgages.

'Court's power to adjust equities'—Even if the doctrine of marshalling, above referred to, is not strictly applicable, the Court has, under this rule, the power to direct the order in which the various mortgaged properties should be sold, for the purpose of protecting the equities that may exist in favour of any of the parties.(3) Thus, where a son undertakes that where the sale of the father's share alone is insufficient to satisfy the mortgage, he will agree that his own share also may be sold, the Court may direct that the interest of the father alone may be sold first.(4)

A and B mortgage certain items of property to C. B then mortgages to D his own items of the mortgaged property. In a suit by C, D cannot claim that the items belonging to A alone should be sold first, the reason being that the mortgagor is not the same in both the mortgages.(5) If, however, the mortgagee has agreed that the properties should be sold in a particular order, the agreement should be given effect to. It has been held by the Madras High Court that S. 56 of the Transfer of Property Act as amended by Act XX of 1929 is exhaustive and the right of marshalling in law since 1929 is co-extensive with the right in equity and so, there is no justification to extend the legal right of marshalling by relying on the provisions of O. 34, Rr 4 and 5 in a way which cannot be justified by any well established principle.(6)

See Note 17 on Rule 5.

11. Interest.—See Note 2 on Order 34 Rule 11.

12. Costs.—Costs awarded to a mortgagee in a suit for sale on a mortgage are part of the mortgage-money(1) and are primarily recoverable from the mortgaged property and not from the mortgagor personally,(2) unless the decree makes the mortgagor personally liable for the costs.(3) This will apply even to a decree passed in appeal. Though the words used in the appellate decree may lend themselves to the construction that the judgment debtor was personally liable, the appellate decree is to be interpreted in accordance with the rules of O. 34 and the party which contends that a departure from the general rule was intended must establish his contention from the words used in the judgment and the decree (3a)

Ordinarily, in a mortgage suit, a puisne mortgagee is not personally made liable for the costs.(4) But if he makes himself responsible for any unnecessary contest in the suit, he may be made personally liable for the costs.(5) The utmost that he can be made liable for is the 'extra' costs caused by his unnecessary contest.(6) The mere fact that a subsequent purchaser of the mortgaged property purchased it for a very small sum does not necessarily imply that he undertook to pay the mortgage debt and that if he failed to pay he was to be personally liable for the costs of the suit, and hence, is no justification for ordering costs to be recovered personally from him.(7)

13. Succession certificate.—It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay,(1) Calcutta(2) and Madras(3) that S. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act (now S. 214 of the Succession Act, 1925) does not apply to suits for sale on mortgages of immovable property, where no personal decree against the mortgagor is asked for. But a contary view is held by the Allahabad High Court.(4)

14. Award.—Rules 4 and 5 of Order 34 do not apply to a decree passed on the award of an arbitrator and hence a 'final decree' is not necessary in such a case before the decree can be executed. See O. 34 R. 5, Note 5.

15. Consent decree.—It is open to the parties to a mortgage suit to enter into a compromise and the Court can, in such a case, pass a decree in terms of the compromise. Such a decree need not conform to the provisions of O. 34.(1) For instance, instead of a lump sum being directed to be paid on a fixed day, a compromise decree may provide that the mortgage-money should be paid in certain instalments and that in default the mortgaged property should be brought to sale. In such a case, it is not necessary to have a final decree passed under R. 5 before bringing the property to sale.(2) For it is open to the mortgagor to waive the benefit of the provision which requires that a final decree should be

But no such appeal lies after the 'final decree has been passed.'(1) In an appeal from a preliminary decree 'ad valorem' court-fee is payable on the amount 'found due' and not on the amount claimed by the plaintiff.(2) Under S. 97 of the Code, where a preliminary decree is not appealed from, it cannot be questioned in an appeal from the final decree.(3) Under the former Code it was held that an application for taking accounts on a mortgage, directed by a decree thereon, was one in execution and that an order on such application was appealable under S. 244 (now S. 47).(4) This view is not tenable under the present Code.

Order 34 Rule 5 (Madras)

1 The substituted sub-rule (3) came into force on 20-8-1931, see ('35) 22 AIR 1935 Mad 716 (717) (DB).

1. Transfer of Property Act, Section 89.—This rule corresponds to S. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act; that section was as follows:

"89. If in any case under S. 88 the defendant pays to the plaintiff or into Court on the day fixed as aforesaid the amount due under the mortgage, the costs, if any, awarded to him and such subsequent costs as are mentioned in S. 94, the defendant shall (if necessary) be put in possession of the mortgaged property; but if such payment is not so made, the plaintiff or the defendent, as the case may be, may apply to the Court for an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged property, and the Court shall then pass an order that such property, or a sufficient part thereof, be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale be dealt with as is mentioned in S. 88: and thereupon the defendant's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished."

The chief points of distinction between the two provisions are the following:

(1) Under S. 89 an 'order absolute' for sale was passed while under the present rule a final 'decree' is passed.
(2) Under S. 89 payment of the mortgage-money could be made either to the 'plaintiff' or 'into the Court.' Under the present rule, payment has to be made only 'into the Court.'
(3) The words at the end of S. 89, "and thereupon the defendant's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished" have been omitted in the present rule.
(4) The provision for the passing of a 'decree' in case of payment by the mortgagor within the proper time is new.

2. Amendments after 1908.—The chief changes introduced in the rule by the amending Act, XXI or 1929, are as follows:

(1) The present rule makes it quite clear that the decree under it is a 'final decree.'
(2) Upon payment of the mortgage-money under the preliminary decree, the present rule requires the mortgagor to 'apply' for a 'final decree.'
(3) The provision in sub-rule (1) as to the defendant paying the mortgage-money at any time before the confirmation of the sale is new.
(4) Sub-rule (2) is new.

3. Scope of the rule.—The present rule applies only where a preliminary decree has been passed under rule 4.(1) A decree passed in a suit for maintenance, the amount of maintenance being a charge upon the property, is not a preliminary decree under R. 4 and R. 5 cannot be applied to such a decree (2) It has been held in the undermentioned case(3) that an agreement registered under S. 14 of the Madras Debt Conciliation Act, 1936 providing for the sale of the mortgaged property in default of payment within a certain time is to be regarded as a final decree in a mortgage suit and hence the provisions of R. 5 apply to it.

4. Final decree, when can be passed.—Order 34 contemplates the passing of a preliminary decree and a final decree in all mortgage suits. The final decree for sale is passed when the payment directed by the preliminary decree has not been made within the proper time. A final decree under R. 5 is necessary only when the decree originally passed is a preliminary decree under R. 4. Hence, where only a money decree has been passed, a final decree under the rule is not necessary although the decree may authorize the decree-holder to realize the decree amount by sale of the judgment-debtor's property.(1) Similarly, where, at the time of the coming into force of the present Code of Civil Procedure, a decree had already been passed under the Transfer of Property Act, S. 88, it has been held that a final decree under the present rule is not necessary.(2) But where property is charged with the payment of the decretal amount it was held in the undermentioned case(3) that the proper mode of realizing the decree-amount was to obtain a decree absolute for sale and that it was not necessary to 'attach' the property.

Where the plaintiff under a preliminary decree in a mortgage suit is directed to pay off a prior mortgage before bringing the mortgaged property to sale, he is entitled to apply for a final decree for sale even though he has made the payment only 'after' the time fixed by the decree.(4)

Where the purchaser of a portion of the equity of redemption is made one of the defendants to a suit on a mortgage and, after the preliminary decree is passed, he obtains an assignment of the mortgagee's rights, he is entitled to apply for a final decree, although only for a 'proportionately reduced portion' of the mortgage amount.(5) Although a final decree is necessary to be passed before execution, yet a mortgagor who allows execution to take place, without raising any objection, will be estopped from contending that the want of a final decree is fatal to the proceedings.(6) Similarly, it was held under the Transfer of Property Act that no objection as to the want of a formal order absolute for sale could be raised where execution had once proceeded without objection.(7)

5. Consent decrees and decrees on award.—It has been seen in Note 4 that this rule applies only where a preliminary decree has been passed under Rule 4. A consent decree providing for payment by instalments is not a 'preliminary' decree under Rule 4 and hence, a final decree under the present rule is not necessary in such a case.(1) Similarly, a decree on an 'award' is not a preliminary decree under Rule 4 and no final decree is necessary to be passed.(2) But a decree-holder is not 'precluded' from applying for a final decree where a preliminary decree by consent has been passed.(3) It has been held that where the mortgagee enters into a compromise with one of the mortgagor—defendants and a consent decree is passed against such defendant, the mortgagee can still obtain a usual mortgage decree against the other defendants if there is nothing in the compromise preventing the mortgagee from proceeding with the suit against the other Co-mortgagors.(3a) See also Note 15 on Rule 4.

Where a mortgage itself is invalid, as being opposed to a certain statute, it cannot be validated by consent decree on the mortgage. The mortgagor can resist an application for final decree on the ground that the mortgage is not binding on him.(4)

6. Only one final decree to be passed.—This rule contemplates the passing of only 'one' final decree.(1) Where the the preliminary decree is appealed from, the final decree should be based on the appellate decree.(2) But this does not mean that a final decree cannot be passed pending an appeal from the preliminary decree and that a final decree so passed is invalid and inexecutable. Where a final decree is passed and subsequently the preliminary decree is modified on appeal, the Court of first instance may either prepare a 'new' final decree or 'amend' the preliminary decree already passed.(4) It has been held that where after the death of original judgment debtor after the preliminary decree the decree-holder obtains a final decree against wrong persons as legal representatives of the deceased by mistake, he can apply for a fresh final decree as against the real legal representatives of the deceased.

Under S. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act, successive applications for an order absolute were maintainable, such applications being proceedings in 'execution'.(5)

7. Form of final decree for sale.—For the form a final decree for sale, see Appendix D, Form No. 6. Nothing in R. 4 or in this rule requires the 'specification' of the mortgaged property in the decree.(1) Where the mortgage-money is payable under the bond in a 'lump sum of the Court is not justified in allowing it to be paid in 'instalments'.(2)

Where a co-mortgagee was made a party-defendant to a suit for sale on the mortgage and the decree directed a payment to him of a part of the decretal amount, it was held that the form of the decree was correct.(3) See also the undermentioned cases.(4)

8. minary decree.(2) A full Bench of the Allahabad High Court(3) has held that where after the passing of a preliminary decree the mortgagor (a Hindu) dies and his heirs are substituted as his legal representatives, their objection that the mortgage, being without legal necessity, is not binding on them cannot be raised in the proceedings for the preparation of the final decree. But the Madras High Court(4) has held that an objection that the property mortgaged is inalienable on grounds of public policy can be raised in the proceedings for a final decree. Where there is an obvious mistake in the preliminary decree the Court is not bound to repeat it in the final decree. Thus, where the mortgaged property has been sold for arrears of revenue free from the mortgage and is no longer liable to be sold under the mortgage decree but the preliminary decree provides for its sale, the mistake need not be repeated in the final decree and such decree must be against the surplus sale proceeds remaining after the payment of revenue.(5)

9. Court to which application for final decree is to be made.—Though the preliminary decree may be modified by the appellate Court, the application for final decree should be made only to the Court of 'first instance'.(1)

10. Application for final decree, if and when necessary.—The rule requires that the mortgagee must 'apply' for a final decree.(1) But it has been held that an application for sale of the mortgaged property may be treated as an application for a decree absolute.(2) An application for a final decree in a mortgage suit need not be in 'writing'.(3) Nor need the plaintiff in his application 'describe the properties' with respect to which he asks for a final decree for sale, and therefore, if any item is omitted in the application, it cannot be contended that the final decree should not be passed in respect thereof.(4) A benamidar transferee of a preliminary decree may apply for a final decree.(5) So also where a preliminary decree ascertains the amount due to a puisne mortgagee impleaded as a party in a suit on the prior mortgage he can apply for a final decree on default of payment by the mortgagor of the amount due to the prior mortgagee, even though the decree does not authorize him to do so (5a). A decree-holder who attaches in execution of his decree a preliminary mortgage decree obtained by his judgment-debtor cannot apply for a final decree under this rule.(6) A mortgagee who a mortgage decree was not lost till the sale was actually held and confirmed.(1) Thus, it was held that the mortgagor could apply to stop a sale under the Civil Procedure Code, O. 21 R. 69,(2) or have the sale set aside under O. 21 R. 89.(3) The amendment of 1929 gives express legislative sanction to the said view, namely that the mortgagor's right to redeem continues till the 'confirmation of the sale'. (4) The right of redemption given by this rule is, however, different from the right given by S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act. The right of redemption given by S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act includes the right of total redemption given by the first paragraph as well as the right of partial redemption given by the last paragraph of that section and the right is the right to redeem by paying or rendering the 'mortgage money' or the 'mortgage debt'. The moment the final decree is passed this debt merges in the decretal debt. So after the final decree neither the right of total redemption nor the right of partial redemption given by S. 60 survives the final decree for sale. All that remains thereafter is the different right of total 'redemption' conferred by this rule.(4a)

In this connection it may be noted that, under S. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act, the defendant's right to redeem and the security became both 'extinguished' on the passing of the order absolute.(5) The words as to the extinguishment have been omitted in the present rule with the effect that a final decree does not now extinguish the mortgage security or the right to redeem.(6)

Where a period has been fixed for the payment of the mortgage-money under the preliminary decree, it is not open to the mortgagor to pay the money before the date fixed with costs and interest calculated 'up to the date of payment' only and avoid further liability for costs and interest.(7)

Under sub-rule (2), a mortgagor who applies under this rule to get a sale set aside by depositing in Court the mortgage-money must also deposit in Court for payment to the purchaser "a sum equal to five per cent. of the amount of the purchase-money paid into Court by the purchaser." The words "purchase-money paid into Court by the purchaser" mean money actually paid and not the entire purchase-money whether paid into Court or not. It follows, therefore, that under this provision a stranger purchaser can get five per cent. only on the amount he has actually paid into Court and not on the amount of the accepted final bid and that a decree-holder purchaser who sets off his decree against the price can get nothing on the amount set off.(8) See also the undermentioned cases.(9)

14. Payment into Court.—Unlike the provisions of S. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act under which the defendant had to pay the mortgage-money either to the 'plaintiff' or into the 'Court', this rule provides that it should be paid into 'the Court.'(1) But suppose the money is paid out of Court to the mortgagee. Then, if such payment is made 'after' the 'final decree' or after the order absolute

(under the Transfer of Property Act) is passed, O. 21 R. 2, Civil Procedure Code, will clearly apply and the payment can be certified to the executing Court; in the absence of such certification within the limitation period, the execution Court will not take cognizance of it.(2) Even if the payment is made after the 'preliminary' decree and before the 'order absolute' or the 'final decree' is passed, the Court 'executing the final decree' cannot, by virtue of the provisions of O. 21 R. 2, recognize such a payment unless certified.(3) It has been held in the undermentioned case (3a) that O. 21 R. 2 has no application after the sale of the mortgaged property but before its confirmation and it is not open to the mortgagor to pay 'out of court' the amount due to the decree-holder. If, however, the mortgagor adjusts the decree out of Court and pays the five per cent. to the auction purchaser which amount the latter retains with him, the auction purchaser is precluded from objecting to the setting aside of the sale. On the question whether the Court 'dealing with an application for a final decree' can recognize such a payment, it was held by the High Courts of Madras(4) and Lahore(5) and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Peshawar,(6) that O. 34 R. 5 prescribes only one method of payment, namely 'into Court' and that a payment 'out' of Court cannot be recognized. On the other hand, it was held by the High Courts of Calcutta(7) and Rangoon(8) and by the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur, (9) that such a payment could be 'certified' to the Court (Though it is not the executing Court) under the provisions of O. 21 R. 2, that, therefore, a certified payment could be recognized, or a payment could be certified by the Court dealing with the application to pass a final decree, but that a payment, not so certified within the period of limitation prescribed therefor, could not be recognized. Commissioner's Court of Nagpur(12) had held that such a payment could be recognized under O. 23 R. 3, Civil Procedure Code, as an adjustment of a 'pending' suit, though, in a later case,(13) the Nagpur Court had disagreed with this view on the ground that O. 23 R. 3 could not apply to a satisfaction of a decree 'already passed.' The High Court of Lahore had also held that O. 23 R. 3 is inapplicable to such a payment.(14) According to the Oudh Chief Court, a payment out of Court might be recognized by the Court dealing with an application for final decree if such payment was admitted by the decree-holder but not if it was denied by him, the Court in such a case not having the power to enquire into the disputed payment. (15) Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee have now set at rest this conflict, agreeing with the view of the High Courts of Allahabad and Patna and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur. Their Lordships have held that as the mortgage suit continues until the final decree is passed O. 21 R. 2 has no application in such a case; that it is the duty of the judge to satisfy himself as to whether any adjustment has been arrived at between the parties and to pass a decree in accordance with the result of his enquiry.(15a) See also O. 23 R. 3, Note 4 in the A. I. R. commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edn.

Even in cases arising under the Transfer of Property Act, there was a conflict of opinions, but of a somewhat different nature. It was held by the Allahabad High Court and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh, that a proceeding under S. 89 of that Act for obtaining an order absolute was a proceeding in execution, and therefore the Court dealing with an application for an order absolute, being an 'executing' Court, could not recognize a payment after the preliminary decree unless it had been certified within time.(16) The High Court of Calcutta,(17) on the other hand, held that a proceeding for an order absolute is not one in execution, and that the Court dealing with such application can recognize such payments, especially as S. 89 expressly provided that payment may be to the 'plaintiff' or into the Court.

It has therefore been held that under S. 70 of the Transfer of Property Act a mortgagee decree-holder is entitled to have his decree satisfied by sale of the accession made to the mortgaged property after the passing of the final decree.(8a)

Where the judgment-debtor contends that the decree refers to some other property than the one proceeded against by the judgment-creditor, it is for him to show which that property is .(9)

18. Power to enlarge time.—Rule 4 as amended by Act XXI of 1929 empowers the Court to enlarge the time fixed for payment of the mortgage-money under a preliminary decree.(1) This renders obsolete the cases(2) before Act XXI of 1929 which held that as there was no provision in R. 5 (as there was in R. 3 or R. 8) for enlargement of time, the Court had no power to enlarge the time fixed by a preliminary decree for payment.

There is a conflict of decisions as to where a preliminary decree is appealed from but the appellate decree merely confirms the lower Court's decree, whether the time fixed for payment by the lower Court's decree is or is not in any way extended. See Note 9 on S. 148 of the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edn.

the 'judgment-debtor.' But a sale under a mortgage decree passes the interest both of the mortgagor as well as of the mortgagee.(1) Where the mortgagee has waived his claim against a particular mortgagor, the sale does not operate on the rights of that mortgagor.(2)

Any enlargement which takes place in the interest of the mortgagor subsequent to the final decree enures for the benefit of the auction-purchaser.(3) On the other hand, he is liable to pay the Government revenue accruing due on the property after the purchase.(4)

A mortgagee decree-holder purchasing the mortgaged property in execution of his decree is not bound to give credit to the mortgagor for the market-value of the property but only for the actual price for which he purchased it.(5)

A mortgagee who himself purchases the mortgaged property in execution of his decree for sale becomes the owner of the property and cannot maintain, as against subsequent purchasers, the position that the mortgage still remained an encumbrance.(6)

See also the undermentioned cases.(7)

20. Execution of final decree for sale.—Proceedings for sale under a final decree or under an order absolute are proceedings in execution.(1) Consequently, the Court executing the final decree cannot go behind the decree, (2) though, by consent of parties, accounts not allowed by the decree can be taken in execution.(3) A mere 'preliminary decree' under R. 4 is incapable of execution; it is only the 'final' decree that can be executed.(4) But where, in a case under the Transfer of Property Act, a decree was executed without an order absolute having been obtained, and the judgment-debtor did not raise any objection to such course at the proper time, it was held that he was estopped from raising the contention subsequently, that the decree was not executable.(5) A decree for sale providing in terms that the rights of prior mortgagees should not be prejudiced is not incapable of execution.(6)

No 'attachment' is necessary before sale under a mortgage decree(7) and consequently, O. 21 R. 58, Civil Procedure Code, does not apply to claims preferred against the execution of mortgage decrees.(8) Under S. 20 of the Oudh Laws Act (XVIII) of 1876) the restrictions imposed by S. 60 of the Code are applicable to mortgage decrees also.(9)

The transferee of the mortgagor's interests after the final decree is not a necessary party to the execution proceedings.(10)

A Court can sell under a mortgage decree only the property comprised in the mortgage,(11) and the mortgagee cannot in execution of his 'mortgage decree,' seek any remedy against the other properties of the mortgagor.(12)

Proceedings for execution of a final decree for sale can be stayed under order 41 Rule 6 of the Code.(13)

Order 21 Rule 83 of the Code does not, under the express terms thereof, apply to mortgage decrees.(14)

21. Transfer of final decree.—Prior to the addition of clause (e) to sub-s. (1) of S. 17 of the Registration Act, by Act XXI of 1929, a transfer of a final decree for sale was held not to require registration;(1) but now the law is otherwise.

22. Injunction restraining mortgagor from receiving income of mortgaged property.—After a final decree for sale has been passed in a mortgage suit, the Court has no power to grant an injunction restraining the mortgagor from receiving the income of the mortgaged property. It can only bring the property to sale.(1)

Such decree is therefore not open to revision under the Civil Procedure Code, S. 115.(1) An order rejecting an application for a final decree amounts to a dismissal of the suit and, as such, is appealable as a decree.(2) But on order allowing an application under this rule is not appealable.(3) The reason is that the order stands in the place of the judgment and it is only the decree that is drawn up in pursuance thereof that is a appealable. A decision as to the order in which the mortgaged properties should be sold may amount to a decree if it affects the rights of co-defendants 'inter se.'(4) Where after a sale in execution of a mortgage decree, the mortgagor applies for an order under sub-r.(1) of this rule, the decision of the executing Court on such application is covered by S. 47, Civil Procedure Code, and is appealable.(5) whether proceedings for order absolute under S. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act were proceedings in execution of the decree under S. 88 or proceedings in the suit itself, some cases taking the former view(1) and others taking the latter view.(2) This conflict is now settled under the new Code which makes it clear that a decree under R. 4 is incapable of execution(3) and that the proceedings under R. 5 are proceedings in the suit itself for a supplemental decree and not proceedings in execution.(4) Hence, the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, O. 22, apply to proceedings for final decree.(5) Similarly, the doctrine of 'lis pendens' applies to such proceedings.(6) The Madras High Court has held in the undermentioned case(7) that a mortgage suit must be considered to be pending till a final decree under sub-r. (1) or sub-r. (3) of this rule is passed and that the mere dismissal of an application for a final decree though it may amount to a decree and be appealable under S. 96, Civil Procedure Code, is not equivalent to a dismissal of the 'suit'. As to whether parties can be added after a preliminary decree has been passed and before a final decree is passed, see Note 32 on Order 1 Rule 10 of the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edn.

30. Joint decree-holders.—One of several joint decree-holders cannot certify satisfaction of the decree beyond his own interest in the decree so as to bind the other decree-holders.(1)

Under the Transfer of Property Act, where a joint decree under S. 88 of the Act was passed in favour of several persons, some of them could apply for an order absolute in favour of all.(2)

1. Transfer of Property Act, Section 90.— This rule corresponds to S. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act; that section ran as follows:

"90. When the nett proceeds of any such sale are insufficient to pay the amount due for the time being on the mortgage, if the balance is legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold, the Court may pass a decree for such sum."

The word "found" between the words "are" and "insufficient" is new.

As to the law before the amendment of the Transfer of Property Act, see the undermentioned cases.[1]

2. Amendments after 1908.— The rule was amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929, as follows:

(1) The words "any sale held under the last preceding rule" have been substituted for the words "any such sale."

('26) 13 AIR 1926 Nag 168 (169).

(2) The words "an application by him" (plaintiff) are new.

3. Personal decree for balance against mortgagor.— This rule provides that the mortgagee may, by way of application, obtain a personal decree against the mortgagor, for the balance still remaining due to him after the mortgaged property is sold.[1] The object of the rule is to enable such a decree to be passed in the mortgage suit itself and to avoid multiplicity of proceedings.[2] In fact a separate suit for enforcing the personal liability would be barred under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, Order 2 Rule 2.[3]

A personal decree under this rule will, however, be granted only after the mortgagee has exhausted his remedies against the security; in other words, it will be granted only after the sale has been carried out and the deficiency ascertained; it is a relief which will not be granted to the mortgagee until that stage is reached.[4] The mere fact, therefore, that the plaint does not contain a prayer for such relief[5] or that the original decree does not reserve a liberty to the plaintiff to apply for a personal decree[6] will not preclude the mortgagee from applying under this rule when the deficiency is ascertained. Where a compromise in a mortgage suit provided for payment of the mortgage money in certain instalments, and on default, for execution by sale of the mortgaged properties "in the usual way," but did not reserve any right to the plaintiff to apply for a personal judgment, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that there was nothing to suggest that the plaintiff agreed to forgo the benefit of the personal covenant, and that the powers of the Court to give that relief do not depend on O. 34 R. 6 of the Code nor are they derived from the clause in the decree reserving leave to the plaintiff to apply for a personal judgment.[7] The usual liberty clause in a preliminary decree involves no adjudication as to the right to a personal decree for the balance. It is intended to make it clear that no inference should be drawn from the omission to deal with it in the preliminary decree.[8]

It follows from what has been said above that the rule contemplates a separate decree being passed for the balance; a Court will be acting irregularly, therefore, in providing in the decree for sale itself that the mortgagee may proceed personally against the mortgagor for the balance.[9] On the other hand, the preliminary decree should not direct that properties not mortgaged should not be proceeded against; the question must be left for decision at the proper time.[10] But where, at the time of the original decree, a decision has been given as to the personal liability to the defendant, the question cannot be raised again on general principles of resjudicata.[11] But where, there has been no decision on the point, the mere fact

A decree for sale providing for execution thereof personally against the mortgagor in case of deficiency though contrary to the provisions of Rule 6, is not void on that ground.[13] No fresh supplementary decree under Rule 6 can be passed[14] or is necessary in such a case[15] before enforcing the personal liability, though execution cannot be issued until the mortgaged property has been sold and the proceeds found insufficient to satisfy the mortgage.[16]

Similarly, the mortgagee is not entitled to proceed against the non-hypothecated properties under the original decree for sale without a personal decree under this rule.[17] But where execution is allowed against the non-mortgaged properties of the mortgagor, without such a personal decree having been obtained, and the mortgagor fails to object to such procedure, he will be estopped subsequently from objecting to the execution on the ground of the want of a personal decree.[18]

A personal decree under R. 6 can only be passed in respect of the mortgage to which the decree for sale under which the mortgaged property has been sold relates. Thus, where a person holds two mortgages over the same property and obtains two decrees upon them but sells the mortgaged property under one of them, he cannot apply for a decree under R. 6 if the balance of the sale proceeds, after satisfying the decree under which the sale is held, is not sufficient to satisfy the other mortgage.[19] Similarly, where a puisne mortgagee who has obtained a decree on his mortgage is joined as a party to a suit on a prior mortgage and the property is sold in execution of the decree on the prior mortgage but the balance of sale proceeds after satisfying the prior mortgage is not sufficient to satisfy the puisne mortgage, the puisne mortgagee cannot obtain a decree under R. 6 for his amount.[20] See also Note 10.

The present rule makes it clear that the plaintiff must apply for a decree under this rule and that the Court cannot pass the decree suo motu. The law was the same even before the amendment of the rule in this respect by Act XXI of 1929.[21] But the application need not be in writing nor need it be signed.[22]

A decree under R. 6 can be made only against the defendants in the original suit.[23]

A personal decree under this rule can be executed either against the person of the mortgagor or by attachment and sale of his other properties.[24] A decree under this rule should not, therefore, direct the realization of the amount from any specific property.[25]

Although a mortgage is invalid, a personal decree may be passed in the same suit against the mortgagor on the basis of the personal covenant in the mortgage deed.[26] A personal decree obtained without informing the Court of a previous refusal by it to grant such a decree, cannot be set aside as fraudulent.[27] In the undermentioned case[28] it was held that so long as the preliminary and final decrees in a mortgage suit were not set aside by appropriate proceedings, an application for a personal decree under this rule could be made irrespective of the question of the validity of the preliminary and final decrees. But when the decree for sale obtained by the mortgagee is declared null and void at the instance of a party claiming paramount title to the property the mortgagee has no right to apply under this rule but he can get a personal decree under S. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act.[29]

4. Personal liability of purchaser from mortgagor.—The word "defendant" in R. 6 means the defendant mortgagor and a personal decree cannot be passed under the rule against a purchaser of the equity of redemption.[1] This is so even if the purchaser has contracted with the mortgagor to pay off the mortgage and has retained with himself a portion of the consideration for that purpose. The reason is, that there is no privity of contract between himself and the mortgagee.[2] A personal decree for costs cannot be passed against an auction-purchaser who has purchased the property subject to a mortgage unless his conduct in the suit has been such as to make him liable for the costs.[3]

5. Personal liability is a question of construction of the instrument.— A personal liability to pay the mortgage amount is, in each case, a question of the construction of the mortgage deed.[1] But every simple mortgage[2] and

English mortgage[3] involves, prima facie, a personal obligation to pay. Similarly, prima facie, there is no personal obligation to pay in a usufructuary mortgage or a mortgage by conditional sale.[4] See S. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act. Where the time for payment fixed under the decree nisi was enlarged on condition of the mortgagor paying interest not provided for in the decree, it was held that the mortgagor was personally liable for the payment of such interest.[5]

6. Personal decree against person not the mortgagor.— The word "defendant" in the rule means, as has seen in Note 4, the mortgagor defendant.[1] Where a mortgage bond was executed by the Court of Wards on behalf of a ward, a decree may be passed against the ward under this rule for the balance of mortgage-money due after the sale of the mortgaged proprty and appropriation of the sale proceeds.[2] A personal decree against the managing member of a Hindu joint family binds the junior members of the family though they were not parties to the suit.[3] See also the undermentioned case[3a].

Personal decree against the surety.—A surety who has contracted to make good personally the deficit found on sale of the mortgaged property does not become liable unless the property is found insufficient to repay the debt. Hence in a mortgage suit no conditional decree for the balance can be passed against the surety.[4]

7. Personal decree against the heirs of the mortgagor.— Where the mortgaged property is found to be insufficient to satisfy a mortgage decree obtained against the heirs of a mortgagor, a decree may be passed against them under this rule to the extent of the assets of the deceased in their hands.[1] Where a

a mortgage decree are no longer available by reason of having been sold in execution of a mortgage decree obtained by a prior mortgagee, the plaintiff is not bound to bring the property to sale again before applying for a personal decree under this rule.[4] Similarly, where the mortgagee is unable to sell a portion of the mortgaged properties by reason of their being situated in a Native State which will not execute the decree of a British Indian Court and the sale proceeds of the remaining portion of the properties are not sufficient to satisfy the mortgage, the decree-holder is entitled to a personal decree against the judgment-debtor.[5] Similarly, where a mortgage of joint family property by the father of a Hindu joint family is found to be not for legal necessity, it has been held by the Madras High Court that a conditional decree may be passed against the father personally and against the son's share in the joint family property for the recovery of the balance that may remain due to the mortgagee after the sale of the father's share of the mortgaged property (without the son's share being put to sale).[6] Where a sale in execution of a decree on a mortgage is set aside on the ground that the mortgagor has no saleable interest in the mortgaged property, a personal decree may be passed against the mortgagor because the mortgagee having been compelled to refund the entire purchase-money, the net sale proceeds are nil and therefore insufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt.[7]

A personal decree should not be passed against the mortgagor till the entire mortgaged property ordered to be sold has been sold and the proceeds are found insufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt.[8] But it has been held that it is open to the mortgagee in the plaint to give up his claim against any portion of the mortgaged property and obtain a decree for sale in respect of the rest. If in such a case the sale proceeds of the portion ordered to be sold are not sufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt, the plaintiff may obtain a personal decree against the mortgagor.[9] The undermentioned decisions[10] are inclined to a contrary view.

The deficiency contemplated by the rule is one in regard to the money due in respect of the mortgage on which the final decree for sale is based. Hence, where after a final decree for sale, an arrangement is entered into between the parties for the payment of the decretal amount under which it is agreed that the money due in regard to another mortgage should be treated as also covered by the decree, an application for personal decree cannot be made in respect of such money. But a separate suit will lie for the recovery of such money.[11]

The sale of the mortgaged property need not be necessarily a judicial sale. The rule covers also a private sale.[12] Where the mortgagee himself purchases the mortgaged property in execution of his mortgage decree, with the leave of the Court, the leave to bid puts him in the same position as any other purchaser; he does not stand in any fiduciary relation to the mortgagor and is only bound to give credit for the amount bid by him and may apply for a personal decree for the balance of the mortgage-money remaining due after deducting such amount.[13]

Where a portion of the mortgaged property was acquired by the Government under the Land Acquisition Act, it was held by the Allahabad High Court[14] that the mortgagee's remedy was to bring to sale the rest of the property and then, if there is a balance due, to apply for a personal decree. But the Calcutta High Court[15] has held that where the mortgaged property is compulsorily acquired by the Government, the mortgage lien is transferred to the compensation money standing to the credit of the mortgagor in the Collectorate and the mortgagee is entitled, in execution of a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property, to take out such money without obtaining a further decree under the present rule.

ing off a prior encumbrance is entitled to a personal decree for the deficit due to him having paid off the prior mortgage.[3] It has been held that where after the final decree, the parties enter into an agreement for the enhancement of the interest payable to the decree-holder in consideration of certain concessions on the part of the decree-holder, the unpaid balance of such enhanced interest will come under the term "amount due."[4]

12. "Legally recoverable."—A personal decree cannot be passed in every suit for sale upon a mortgage; such a decree can be passed only where the defendant by his contract or otherwise is under a personal obligation to pay the mortgage-debt[1] and the plaintiff's right to enforce the personal obligation is not barred by limitation at the date of the suit for sale.[2]

For further discussion, see Note 17.

13. "Legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold."—These words mean, by way of illustration, that the balance must be a balance which the mortgagee is not precluded, by the terms of the mortgage, from realizing otherwise than out of the property sold or a balance, the recovery of which is not barred by limitation.[1]

14. Prior and puisne mortgagees.— A puisne mortgagee is not a "defendant" against whom a personal decree may be passed, there being no privity of contract between him and the plaintiff.[1]

15. Costs against puisne mortgagee.— A prior mortgagee is not entitled to a personal decree for costs against a puisne mortgagee.[1] As seen in Note

6, the word "defendant" in this rule means only the mortgagor defendant and not necessarily those claiming title under him.

16. Insolvency of mortgagor.— Where pending a suit by a mortgagee on his mortgage, the mortgagor is declared an insolvent, the plaintiff can still proceed against the mortgaged property.[1] If the mortgaged property is not sufficient to pay the debt, and the mortgagor is personally liable under the mortgage, the mortgagee may prove for the balance in the insolvency proceedings along with the other creditors of the mortgagor, if the personal liability was not time-barred at the date of the institution of the suit on the mortgage.[2] The contrary view has been held in the undermentioned cases.[3]

Can the mortgagee obtain a personal decree under this rule in such a case? Yes, according to the Lahore High Court[4] and the Oudh Chief Court.[5] The decisions of the Allahabad High Court are conflicting.[6]

According to the undermentioned decisions of the Allahabad High Court[7] an order of adjudication of the mortgagor as an insolvent and his subsequent discharge do not affect the mortgagee's right to get a personal decree under this rule. But the correct view seems to be that the insolvency and the subsequent discharge of the mortgagor would not affect the mortgagee's right to a personal decree for the balance under this rule where he could not have proved for such balance under S. 47 of the Provincial Insolvency Act.[8]

17. Limitation.— As has been seen in Note 12, a balance is not "legally recoverable" if the personal remedy is barred by limitation at the date of the suit for sale. Article 132 of the Limitation Act is confined to suits to recover the mortgage-money from the mortgaged property and does not apply to the personal remedy under a mortgage.[1] The personal remedy is governed by the six years' period of limitation in the case of registered instruments and by the three years' period in the case of unregistered instruments. See the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Limitation Act, 2nd (1942) Edn., Art. 116 Notes 19 to 21. As regards a personal decree for interest accrued within six years from the suit for sale, see ibid, Art. 132, Note 12, and the undermentioned case[1a]. The plaintiff's application for a personal decree has to be made under Art. 181 of the Limitation Act, within three years from the date on which the right to apply for a personal decree accrues. See ibid, Art. 181, Note 6.

Where a mortgage decree provides for the sale of the mortgaged property and for realization of any deficiency from the other properties of the mortgagor, the twelve years' period under S. 48 of the Code for enforcing the personal liability runs from the date of the decree and not from the date of the sale of the mortgaged property.[2]

18. Succession certificate.— A personal decree cannot be passed in favour of the heirs of a mortgagee in the absence of a succession certificate produced by them.[1] But a person who has succeeded to the estate of a deceased mortgagee by the right of survivorship need not produce a succession certificate before he can obtain a personal decree against the mortgagor.[2]

19. Notice.— Where a decree-holder applies for a personal decree against the judgment-debtor under this rule, the proper procedure for the Court is to issue notice to the judgment-debtor calling upon him to show cause why the application should not be granted and to hear his objection, if any.[1] But in the absence of fraud, a suit does not lie to set aside an ex parte personal decree under the rule, on the ground of failure to serve notice on the judgment-debtor.[2] An order directing execution to issue against the judgment-debtor personally without a supplemental decree under this rule should not be passed without notice to the judgment-debtor.[3]

20. Execution of personal decree.— An executing Court cannot entertain any question as to the validity of a personal decree which has become final.[1] (See Notes on S. 38 of the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure 4th (1944) Edn.) A mortgage decree, until it reaches the stage shown by the Transfer of Property Act, S. 90 (O. 34 R. 6), does not become a money decree to which S. 209 of the Code of 1882 (now S. 34) relates.[2]

If a personal decree passed under this rule is completely silent with respect to payment of future interest, a claim for the grant of future interest must be rejected by the executing Court.[3]

21. Appeal.— An order granting or refusing an application for a personal decree under the rule is a decree and appealable as such.[1] Ad valorem court-fee is payable on an appeal from such an order as well as on an appeal from a decree under the rule.[2] An application for a personal decree is not a "plaint" and an order returning it for presentation to the proper Court is therefore not appealable under Civil Procedure Code, O. 43 R. 1.[3] Where the original mortgage suit was valued at less than Rs. 5,000, an appeal from a personal decree in the suit lies under S. 21 of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887), to the District Judge and not to the High Court though the personal decree may be for a sum exceeding Rs. 5,000.[4]

22. Nature of proceedings under Rule 6.— Proceedings for a personal decree under this rule are not proceedings in execution but proceedings in the suit and the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, Order 9 are, therefore, applicable thereto.[1]

23. Miscellaneous.

(1) An application for personal decree should be made to the Court which passed the decree for sale and not to the Court to which it was sent for execution.[1]

(2) A decree directing realisation from the other properties of the mortgagor if the mortgaged properties which are to be proceeded against first are not sufficient is not a money decree for purposes of registration.[2]

(ii) the costs of suit, if any, awarded to him, and

(iii) other costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him up to that date, in respect of his mortgage-security, together with interest thereon; or

1. Analogous law.— This rule corresponds to S. 92 of the Transfer of Property Act which ran as follows:

"92. In a suit for redemption, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a decree ordering—that an account be taken of what will be due to the defendant for the mortgage-money and for his costs of the suit, if any, awarded to him, on the day next hereafter referred to, or declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree;

that, upon the plaintiff paying to the defendant or into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due, to be fixed by the Court, the defendant shall deliver up to the plaintiff or to such person as he appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall re-transfer it to the plaintiff free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the defendant or any person claiming under him, or, when the defendant claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims, and shall, if necessary, put the plaintiff into possession of the mortgaged property; and that if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court, the plaintiff shall (unless the mortgage be simple or usufructuary) be absolutely debarred of all right to redeem the property, or (unless the mortgage be by conditional sale) that the property be sold."

2. Amendments after 1908.— The rule has been amended by Act XXI of 1929. The general changes thus introduced are on the same lines as in the case of Rr. 2 and 4: See Notes on Rr. 2 and 4. Further, in case of default by the mortgagor in payment of the mortgage-money within the prescribed time, the old rule provided for foreclosure except where the mortgage was simple or usufructuary and for sale except where the mortgage was one by conditional sale. The present rule has been amended to suit the changes in S. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act as amended by Act XX of 1929. See Notes on Rule 2.

3. Scope of the rule.—As this rule corresponds to Rules 2 and 4, in most particulars, the Notes on Rules 2 and 4 may be consulted. The decree under this rule is preliminary and incapable of execution without a final decree being passed.[1] Order 34 contemplates only one preliminary decree being passed. Hence, it is irregular to first pass a decree for accounts and then again another preliminary decree for redemption. Such a decree for accounts if passed will only have the effect of an interlocutory order for accounts.[2] Where it is found that the money due to the mortgagee has already been paid, a final decree may be at once passed without any preliminary decree.[3] (See Rule 9 which expressly provides for this). A decree for possession on condition of the plaintiff's paying a certain sum within a certain time is not a preliminary decree within this rule.[4]

The rule applies only to a suit for redemption against a mortgagee, and not by one co-mortgagor against another who has redeemed the entire mortgage, for redemption of the plaintiff's share of the mortgaged property.[5] A compromise decree in a redemption suit which is itself capable of execution, does not require a final decree.[6] No application for a final decree can be made under this rule and Rule 8 where a decree had been passed under Section 92 of the Transfer of Property Act.[7]

Ordinarily, a suit for an account on a mortgage cannot be asked for, unless the mortgagor asks for redemption also.[8] The burden, in suits for redemption, is

4. Mode of taking accounts—Sub-rule (1), clause (a).—It has been seen under R. 2, that the object of the Legislature is that complete accounts of all amounts due by either party to the other in respect of the mortgage transaction should be taken in a mortgage suit, so as to avoid unnecessary litigation. A mortgagee in possession is bound to account for the rents and profits of the property (see the Transfer of Property Act, S. 76), and the mortgagor is entitled to deduct from the mortgage-money all sums thus owed by the mortgagee.[1] Where the mortgagee has been in possession of the mortgaged property, the burden is on him to prove that the mortgage has not been satisfied out of the usufruct of the property.[2] In a suit to redeem a puisne mortgagee who has redeemed a prior mortgage, the mortgagor is liable to pay the amounts of both the mortgages.[3] Where a mortgagee is entitled to possession under his mortgage but has been obliged to file a suit against the mortgagor in order to obtain possession he is entitled to add the costs of such suit to the mortgage-money and to demand the same in the suit for redemption against him by the mortgagor.[4] (See the Commentaries on the Transfer of Property Act, Ss. 72 and 76.)

Where a prior mortgagee sues on his mortgage without impleading the puisne mortgagee, and purchases the property in execution of his decree, the puisne mortgagee subsequently suing for redemption, is bound to pay, not the sum for which the property was sold, but the amount due on the mortgage up to the date on which the prior mortgagee obtained possession after the purchase.[5] A Court can investigate accounts with a view to seeing whether the mortgage has been satisfied out of the usufruct, even though, in doing so, it has to deal with questions relating to properties lying outside its jurisdiction.[6] In a suit for the redemption of two distinct mortgages the accounts should be taken separately in respect of each mortgage.[7] A mortgagee who refused a valid tender of the mortgage-money does not thereby cease to be a mortgagee, and the subsequent accounts between him and the mortgagor should be included in the suit for redemption.[8] In a suit for redemption of a mortgage to which the sub-mortgagee also is joined as a party, the decree should direct accounts to be taken of the mortgage as well as of the sub-mortgage and should provide that out of the mortgage-money, the sub-mortgagee should be paid the amount due to him and the balance, if any, should be paid to the mortgagee.[9]

In suits for redemption the account should be taken up to the date of actual redemption or sale as the case may be.[10]

While passing a preliminary a decree for redemption under this rule the Court has power to appoint a commissioner for taking accounts of the mortgaged property.[11]

5. Interest.— In a suit for redemption, the mortgagee's right to interest is not limited to that accruing during the six years preceding the suit.[1] Where a mortgagee who is entitled to possession obtains a decree for possession, he is not entitled to account therefor in suit for redemption— But a separate suit for mesne profits accruing after date fixed for payment and before delivery of possession is not barred.)]

In the absence of anything to contrary in the mortgage deed interest constitutes a charge on the property.[3]

6. Costs.— In a suit for redemption, the mortgagee defendant is entitled to all costs unless he has refused a valid tender of the mortgage-money or has otherwise been guilty of misconduct.[1] Such costs are part of the mortgage-money and in the absence of any express provision in the decree to the contrary, are not personally recoverable from the mortgagor.[2] Where the plaintiff mortgagor has been awarded costs in such a suit, he is entitled to set off the amount of his costs against the mortgage-money payable by him.[3]

7. Subsequent costs, charges and expenses.—The amendments introduced by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929, have made clear that the mortgagee is entitled to charges and expenses properly incurred by him in respect of the mortgage security even subsequent to the preliminary decree. Although on this point, the rules were not so explicit before the above amendment as they are now, the law was recognized to be the same even under the old rules.[1]

8. Subsequent interest as provided in Rule 11. — Rule 7 sub-r. (1) cl. (c) (i) provides for the payment, by the mortgagor, of interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment under the preliminary decree up to the date of the actual realization of the mortgage-money. This point was not conceded under the old rules.[1]

9. Pays into Court on a day within six months.— A decree under this rule should state a period within which the mortgage-money should be paid.[1]

This period may be less than six months.[2] In computing the period so fixed the date of the decree should be excluded.[3]

If the decree for redemption fixes no period for payment it must be taken as an ordinary decree to which Art. 182 of the Limitation Act would apply.[4] But where in a suit for sale by a puisne mortgagee, the preliminary decree directed the plaintiff to pay off the prior mortgage before bringing the mortgaged property to sale, but fixed no period within which the prior mortgage was to be paid off, it was held that, in this respect, the decree was a decree for redemption and the period allowable for payment of the prior mortgage amount could not exceed six months.[5] The rule requires the payment to be made into the Court. As to whether a payment made out of Court can be recognized by the Court, see Note 14 on Rule 5.

10. "Shall deliver up to the plaintiff.....all documents."— On payment of the mortgage-money, the mortgagor is entitled to the return of the mortgage bond,[1] and other documents relating to the title to the land. But where the mortgagee defendant has lost the title deeds, the executing Court cannot, in the absence of any express provision in the decree to that effect, compel him to give security for the value of the property.[2]

11. "Shall.....re-transfer the property to the plaintiff."— The mortgagee is bound, on redemption, to re-transfer the property to the mortgagor, free from the mortgage and from all encumbrances created by him. Thus, if he has leased the property to another, the lease is not binding on the mortgagor who can, therefore, eject the lessee as a trespasser.[1] The property must be transferred along with the accretions, if any, to the property. Thus, where the mortgagee taking advantage of his position as such, has taken a mortgage of the holding of a tenant, the mortgagor is entitled, on redemption, to the possession of the holding, provided he pays the amount due on its mortgage.[2] The rule requires that a mortgagee with possession should, on redemption, put back the mortgagor in possession.[3]

12. Procedure on default of payment.— The rule provides that on default by the mortgagor in the payment of the mortgage-money within the time allowed by the Court, the mortgagee is entitled to apply for a final decree for sale or foreclosure.[1] The present rule provides for a decree for sale in the case of any mortgage other than a usufructuary mortgage, a mortgage by conditional sale or an anomalous mortgage which provides only for foreclosure. It provides for a decree for foreclosure in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale or an anomalous mortgage which provides only for foreclosure. Under the rule, as it was before Act XXI of 1929, a decree for sale was provided for in the case of any mortgage other than one by conditional sale. And a decree for foreclosure was provided for in the case of any mortgage other than a simple or usufructuary one. These changes are in conformity with the changes in S. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act made by Act XX of 1929. See Notes on R. 3 for further information. The undermentioned cases[2] decided under the old rule are now only of academic interest.

In the case of a usufructuary mortgage, the default by the mortgagor in the payment of the mortgage money within the time allowed by the preliminary decree does not deprive him of his right to make the payment and to apply for final decree at any time.[3] The provisions of R 7 (1) (c) (ii) do not apply to a usufructuary mortgage and therefore the usufructuary mortgagee cannot apply for final decree on default of payment by the mortgagor.[4]

13. Extension of time fixed for payment.— The amendments in this rule and in Rule 8 made by Act XXI of 1929 make it clear that the Court can extend the time fixed for payment from time to time and that, till a decree for foreclosure is actually passed, or till the sale is confirmed, the mortgagor can redeem the property. The undermentioned cases[1] decided under the old rules have only an academic interest now. Time for payment may be extended though the period originally fixed may have expired.[2] The use of the expression "extend the time" in the new rule instead of the expression "postpone the day" which occurred in the proviso to old Rule 8 makes this clear.[3] Extension of time may be granted irrespective of the nature of the mortgage in question. Even though a decree for redemption may have been passed by the appellate Court, an application for extension of time should be made to the Court of first instance and not to the appellate Court.[5] Where, in a partition suit, the alienation of a certain property belonging to the joint family was found to be binding only to a limited extent and a decree was passed for possession thereof on condition of a certain amount being paid to the alienee within a fixed date, it was held that this was in effect a decree for redemption and that the Court could extend the time fixed for payment.[6] Section 148 of the Code does not apply to the extension of time fixed by a decree for redemption.[7] The limitation for an application for a final decree for redemption runs from the date of payment although the Court may have extended the period for payment originally fixed.[8] Where a preliminary decree is simply confirmed in appeal, there is a conflict of decisions as to whether the period fixed runs from the date of the decree of the Court of first instance. See Note 9 on S. 148 of the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edition.

See also Note 18 on Order 34 Rule 2 and Note 7 on Order 34 Rule 8.

14. Form of decree.— For the form of a preliminary decree under this rule see Appendix D, Form Nos. 7, 7A, 7B and 7C. The decree ought not to contain unnecessary declarations.[1] It should not direct that the defendant should not be evicted till he has cut the crops sown by him.[2]

15. Second suit for redemption.— See Note 40 on Section 11 of the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edition.

16. Who can redeem.— If a party, whose title is to some extent imperfect at the date of the institution of the suit, seeks to redeem and is able to prove a perfect title at the hearing of the case, he should have a decree for redemption. Thus, if a purchaser in execution sale of the equity or redemption sues for redemption before he has obtained a certificate of sale, but obtains such certificate before the hearing, he should have a decree for redemption.[1] In a suit by a purchaser of the equity of redemption, for redemption, the mortgagee cannot question the adequacy of the consideration for the sale.[2] See also S. 91 of the Transfer of Property Act.

17. Trespass by mortgagor before redemption.— Where a redemption decree has been made but the mortgagor, without having made any payment, unlawfully trespasses upon the property and dispossesses the mortgagee in possession, the latter can sue to recover back possession.[1]

Final decree in redemption suit.

[a]R. 8. [New: Act IV of 1882, S. 93.] (1) Where, before a final decree debarring the plaintiff from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed or before the confirmation of a sale held in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub-rule (3) of this rule, the plaintiff makes payment into Court of all amounts due from him under sub-rule (1) of rule 7, the Court shall, on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf, pass a final decree or, if such decree has been passed, an order—

(a) ordering the defendant to deliver up the documents referred to in the preliminary decree, and, if necessary,—

(b) ordering him to re-transfer at the cost of the plaintiff the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree, and, also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the plaintiff in possession of the property.

(2) Where the mortgaged property or a part thereof has been sold in pursuance of a decree passed under sub-rule (3) of this rule, the Court shall not pass an order under sub-rule (1) of this rule, unless the plaintiff, in addition to the amount mentioned in sub-rule (1), deposits in Court for payment to the purchaser a sum equal to five per cent. of the amount of the purchase-money paid into Court by the purchaser.

Where such deposit has been made, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for repayment of the amount of the purchase-money paid into Court by him, together with a sum equal to five per cent. thereof.

(3) Where payment in accordance with sub-rule (1) has not been made, the Court shall, on application made by the defendant in this behalf,—

(a) in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale or of such an anomalous mortgage as is hereinbefore referred to in rule 7, pass a final decree declaring that the plaintiff and all persons claiming under him are debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and, also, if necessary, ordering the plaintiff to put the defendant in possession of the mortgaged property; or

(b) in the case of any other mortgage, not being a usufructuary mortgage, pass a final decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and the proceeds of the sale

1. Analogous law.— The rule corresponds to S. 93 of the Transfer of Property Act which ran as follows:

"93. If payment is made of such amount and of such subsequent costs as are mentioned in S. 94, the plaintiff shall, if necessary, be put into possession of the mortgaged property.

If such payment is not so made, the defendant may (unless the mortgage is simple or usufructuary) apply to the Court for an order that the plaintiff and all persons claiming through or under him be debarred absolutely of all right to redeem, or (unless the mortgage is by conditional sale) for an order that the mortgaged property be sold.

If he applies for the former order, the Court shall pass an order that the plaintiff and all persons claiming through or under him be absolutely debarred of all right to redeem the mortgaged property, and may, if necessary, deliver possession of the property to the defendant.

If he applies for the latter order, the Court shall pass an order that such property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is found due to the defendant, and that the balance be paid to the plaintiff or other persons entitled to receive the same.

On the passing of any order under this section the plaintiff's right to redeem and the security shall, as regards the property affected by the order, both be extinguished:

Provided that the Court may, upon good cause shown, and upon such terms, if any, as it thinks fit, from time to time postpone the day fixed under S. 92 for payment to the defendant."

See the undermentioned case.[1]

2. Amendments after 1908.— The rule was amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929, on the same lines as

Order 34 R. 8—Note 1.

1. ('48) 35 AIR 1948 Oudh 238 (241, 242, 243, 244): 22 Luck 325 (DB). Prayag Narain Trivedi v. Mohd. Ebrahim. (There is nothing in the wording of the unamended S. 93 or any other section of the Transfer of Property Act to lead to the conclusion that a decree for sale, if not executed within the time allowed, operates as a decree for foreclosure. In fact in the case of a usufructuary mortgage, a decree for foreclosure is not to be passed. Hence, a failure to execute a decree and the order absolute for sale within the time allowed will not divest the mortgagor of his title to the mortgaged property, in the case of an usufructuary mortgage.
Where after the lapse of time for the execution of an order absolute for sale, the mortgagor and mortgagee continue to be unaware that the security had become extinguished, and that the mortgagor was entitled to get back possession of the property and the mortgagee continues in possession, such possession cannot be pleaded to be adverse to that of the mortgagor.)

Rules 3 and 5. The provision as to extension of time has been transferred to Rule 7: See Notes on Rules 3, 5 and 7. Under the old rule, a decree for sale could not be passed in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale only. Under the present rule, no decree for sale can be passed even in the case of usufructuary mortgages.

3. Scope of the rule.— The decree under Rule 7 is only a preliminary decree and a final decree under the present rule is necessary to terminate a suit for redemption.[1] As has been seen already in Note 4 on Rule 7, in a redemption suit there should be a complete settlement of all accounts between the parties in relation to the mortgage.[2] See also Rules 9 and 10, which show that accounts should be taken right up to the date of actual payment of mortgage-money and re-transfer of possession.[3]

4. Decree for redemption.— On payment of the mortgage-money before a final decree for sale or foreclosure is passed, the mortgagor is entitled to a final decree for redemption. A mortgagor can, however, exercise the right of redemption in the case of a decree for sale, at any time before the sale is confirmed though the final decree for sale may have been passed in the meanwhile. If the redemption is after the final decree for sale, the mortgagor will get an order for the delivery of the title deeds, etc., as indicated in sub-rule (1). If the mortgagor seeks to redeem the property after the sale and before it is confirmed, he must deposit for payment to the auction-purchaser five per cent. of the purchase-money in addition to the mortgage-money. Under sub-rule (1) all rights acquired by the mortgagee under the mortgage must, on redemption, be re-transferred to the mortgagor.[1] The mortgagee in possession need not vacate possession till he has received the full mortgage-money.[2]

A mortgagor is not disentitled to a decree for redemption simply because he has attached under his decree for costs against the mortgagee, the mortgage-money deposited by himself in Court to the mortgagee's credit, and withdrawn a portion of it.[3]

The mortgagee is not entitled to notice of payment into the Court of the mortgage-money under the preliminary decree.[4] Nor is the mortgagor required to make an application to the Court before paying in the money.[5] The refusal of the treasury officer to accept the mortgage-money though paid within the proper time does not amount to default by the judgment-debtor.[6] Where the mortgagor has paid into the Court the sum ascertained by the first Court, pending an appeal by the mortgagee as to the amount due, the mortgagor is entitled to credit for the amount paid though it lapsed to the Government through the failure of the mortgagee to take the money out of Court.[7] Payment to an unauthorized person does not discharge a mortgage.[8]

5. Redemption after due date.— The present rule makes it clear that though a mortgagor has failed to redeem the mortgaged property within the time allowed by the Court, he is entitled to do so at any time before a final decree for foreclosure is passed or a sale of the mortgaged property under a final decree for sale is confirmed. See Note 8.

In the case of a usufructuary mortgage it is only the plaintiff mortgagor who can apply for final decree. The mortgagee has no such right. The mortgagor can make the payment even after the period for payment of the amount declared due by the preliminary decree has expired and apply for final decree.

6. Final decree for foreclosure or sale—Sub-rule (3).—The provision as to the passing of a final decree for foreclosure under the circumstances indicated in the rule is imperative.[1] A final decree for foreclosure or sale can only be passed on an application by the mortgagee.[2] A final decree for foreclosure cannot be passed in the case of a simple mortgage.[3] The absence of any provision in the preliminary decree, for the passing of a final decree for sale or foreclosure, is no bar to the passing of such a decree.[4] An application for final decree should be made to the Court of first instance though the preliminary decree was modified in appeal.[5] In the undermentioned case[6] it was held that the mortgagor himself was entitled to apply for a final decree for sale, if he was not able to pay the mortgage-money.

7. Power to enlarge time.— The provision as to the enlargement of time contained in the proviso to the old R. 8 has now been transferred to the present Rule 7 by Act XXI of 1929. A payment of the amount due within the time fixed entitles the mortgagor to a final decree for redemption.[1] But the time can be extended by the Court for making such payment under this rule. The principles discussed in Note 18 on R. 2 apply in general to an extension of time under this rule. Time can be extended even though the time originally fixed has expired.[2] But no extension can be granted unless "good cause" is shown therefor.[3] Nor is the mortgagor entitled to an extension of time as a matter of right.[4] See also the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure 4th (1944) Edn., S. 148, Note 9.

mortgagor who seeks to pay the money after the time fixed must apply for extension.[6] The application need not, however, be in any prescribed form and even an application to pay the money may itself be treated as an application for extension.[7] But the application must be made to the Court of first instance, even though the decree may have been confirmed on appeal.[8]

It was held in the undermentioned cases[9] that the power to enlarge time under this rule applies to what are strictly suits for redemption. But where, in a partition suit, it was found that an alienation of joint family property was partially binding on the plaintiff and a decree was passed for possession against the alienee conditional on the payment of a certain sum of money to him within a certain time, it was held by the High Court of Madras[10] that the decree was in effect one for redemption, and that the time fixed by it could, therefore, be extended under this rule.

Even if the time is not extended, the mortgagor, as has been made clear by this rule, can redeem the property at any time before a final decree for foreclosure is passed, or a sale of the property is confirmed by the Court. And this was the practice followed even before the amendment under Act XXI of 1929 was made.[11] As to decrees passed before the Transfer of Property Act, see the undermentioned case.[12]

It has been held by the Chief Court of Oudh that even in the case of a compromise decree for redemption, the Court is entitled under this rule to extend the time in proper cases.[13]

9. Appeal.— An order refusing to extend time is appealable under the Civil Procedure Code, O. 43 R. 1 (o).[1] But no appeal lies against an order "granting an extension of time.[2] It is doubtful whether an order merely refusing to pass a final decree but leaving it open to the mortgagee to apply again for such a decree is appealable as a decree.[3]

An order refusing an application under this rule praying from account from mortgagee in possession for period between preliminary decree and final decree is appealable.[4]

Recovery of balance on mortgage in suit for redemption.

[a]R. 8A. [New.] Where the net proceeds of any sale held under the last preceding rule are found insufficient to pay the amount due to the defendant, the Court, on application by him, may, if the balance is legally recoverable from the plaintiff otherwise than out of the property sold, pass a decree for such balance.

[Cf. Rule 6.]

a. This rule was inserted by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act (XXI of 1929), Section 5.

1. Scope of the rule.— This rule is new and was inserted by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929. The rule provides for a personal decree being passed in a suit for redemption against the mortgagor where the proceeds of a sale held on the default of the mortgagor to pay the mortgage-money in time under a decree for redemption are not sufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt. The rule corresponds to Rule 6, which provides for a personal decree being passed in a suit for sale by the mortgagee.

The words "the last preceding rule" refer to R. 8 as amended by Act XXI of 1929 under which no decree for sale can be passed in the case of a usufructuary mortgage as was possible under the old rule. Where, therefore, a decree for sale was passed in respect of a usufructuary mortgage under the old rule and a sale held in pursuance thereof, it was held that such a sale could not be said to have been held "under the last preceding rule" within the meaning of this rule, and that consequently no personal decree for the balance remaining due could be passed under this rule.[1]

Decree where nothing is found due or where mortgagee has been overpaid.

R. 9. [New.] Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, if it appears, upon taking the account referred to in rule 7, that nothing is due to the defendant or that he has been overpaid, the Court shall pass a decree directing the defendant, if so required, to re-transfer the property and to pay to the plaintiff the amount which may be found due to him: and the plaintiff shall, if necessary, be put in possession of the mortgaged property.

1. Scope of the rule.— This rule is new and gives effect to the practice followed in cases arising under the Transfer of Property Act[1] and in cases arising even previous thereto.[2]

If the Court finds that the mortgage has been discharged, a decree for redemption can be passed at once without the formality of a preliminary and final decree.[3] A mortgagee who continues in possession of the mortgaged property after the mortgage has been satisfied is liable for all the receipts from the property with interest from the time when the debt was fully paid off.[4] Extra court-fee in addition to the court-fee paid on the principal sum due need not be paid on the surplus profits that may be decreed to a mortgagor in a redemption suit.[5] A claim by a mortgagor for recovery of over-payment received by the mortgagee is a relief included in a suit for redemption to which Art. 148 of the Limitation Act applies.[6]

The rule applies to an enquiry under Sections 12 and 16 of the U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act (XXVII of 1934).[7]

2. Deduction of costs payable to mortgagor.— The mortgagor is entitled to set off the costs awarded to him against the mortgage-money[1] in preference to the claim of the defendant-mortgagee's attorney for his costs of the suit.[2]

3. Claim for over-payments.— The intention of the Legislature being that a suit for redemption should include the entire accounts between the parties in relation to the mortgage, a separate suit for over-payments is barred under the Civil Procedure Code, S. 11 and O. 2 R. 2.[1] But mesne profits accruing after the date fixed for payment under the preliminary decree[2] or after the date of payment under the decree,[3] have been held to be recoverable by a separate suit. No such suit can, however, be brought for the profits accruing before such date.[4] See also O. 2 R. 2, Note 24 of the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edition.

that he was solely entitled to the money. This was disputed by the other heirs of the mortgagee and they brought a suit against the mortgagor, on the mortgage impleading X as a defendant. It was found that X was not solely entitled to the mortgage-money. The suit was compromised as between the plaintiffs and the mortgagor. It was held that, on the equitable principle contained in this rule, the Court could pass a decree in the same suit in favour of the mortgagor against X for the amount paid to him by the mortgagor in excess of the share to which X was entitled.[5]

a. Rules 10 and 11 were substituted by Section 6 of the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act (XXI of 1929) for the original Rules 10 and 11.

Synopsis.

1. Analogous law.
2. Amendments after 1908.
3. Mortgagee is ordinarily entitled to his costs.
4. "Such costs of the suit.....as have been properly incurred."
5. Costs of appeal.
6. "Other costs, charges and expenses."
7. Power of executing Court to add costs.
8. Costs awarded by decree, mode of realization.
9. Appeal.

1. Analogous law.— The role corresponds to Section 94 of the Transfer of Property Act which was as follows:

> "94. In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a redemption or a sale by the Court under this Chapter, the Court shall, unless the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him to costs, add to the mortgage-money such costs of suit as have been properly incurred by him since the decree for foreclosure, redemption or sale up to the time of actual payment."

2. Amendments after 1908.— The rule was substituted for the original rule by Act XXI of 1929. The rule is not retrospective and does not apply to mortgage decrees passed before the coming into force of the amending Act.[1]

3. Mortgagee is ordinarily entitled to his costs.— In a suit for sale, foreclosure or redemption, the mortgagee is ordinarily entitled to his costs unless his "conduct has been such as to disentitle him thereto."[1] For the scale on which costs are awarded, see the undermentioned cases.[2]

4. "Such costs of the suit.....as have been properly incurred."— The mortgagor's liability in a mortgage suit cannot be enhanced by a final decree beyond the point indicated in the preliminary decree, except in so far as is provided for by the present rule.[1] It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that the rule refers only to costs incurred between the preliminary decree and the final decree and not to the costs incurred subsequent to the final decree, in execution proceedings.[2] The Chief Court of Oudh, on the other hand, has dissented from this view and held that the rule applies to all costs incurred in connection with the suit up to the time of actual payment, whether before or after the final decree.[3] It is submitted that the Oudh view accords more with the language of the rule than the Allahabad view.

5. Costs of appeal.—There is a conflict of decisions as to whether the costs of an unsuccessful appeal by the mortgagor from the preliminary decree in a mortgage suit can be added to the mortgage-money or should be recovered from the mortgagor personally. In some cases it has been held that such costs can be added to the mortgage-money,[1] while other cases hold that the rule refers primarily to costs incurred in the Court which prepares the final decree and that therefore the costs of appeal cannot be added to the mortgage-money but should be recovered personally from the mortgagor.[2] According to the undermentioned cases,[3] however,

Synopsis

1. Amendments after 1908.
2. Interest in mortgage suits.
3. Rule of damdupat.

See Note 16 on Section 34 of the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edn.

1. Amendments after 1908.— The present rule is new. It was substituted for the old R. 11 which was repealed by Act XXI of 1929 and re-enacted as S. 94 of the Transfer of Property Act. Prior to Act XXI of 1929, there was no special statutory provision regarding interest in mortgage suits corresponding to the present rule.

2. Interest in mortgage suits.— This rule was inserted in the Code by Act XXI of 1929.

(A) Interest prior to the suit.

Interest cannot be claimed in every case as a matter of course. No interest is recoverable unless there is an express or implied agreement to pay interest[1] or unless it is recoverable under mercantile usage or under some statutory provision, such as the Interest Act, 1839 (See Note 7 on S. 34 of the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edn.). Where there is an agreement to pay interest, the Court should decree it at the agreed rate, however high it may be,[2] unless it is penal,[3] or the rate of interest is excessive and the transaction is substantially unfair (see the Usurious Loans Act, 1918), in either of which cases the Court may decree what it considers a reasonable rate of interest.[4] A stipulation for the payment of compound interest is not necessarily penal.[5] Nor does the mere fact that the rate of interest is excessive give rise to a presumption of undue influence where it is not proved that the lender was in a position to dominate the will of the debtor.[6] But it has been held by the Sind Chief Court that under this rule the Court has a discretion to refuse interest prior to suit in appropriate circumstances.[7] The interest decreed is a charge on the mortgaged property.[8]

Where the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property, the income from the property should be applied in discharge of the interest payable to him.[9] But a mortgagee who is entitled to possession in lieu of interest cannot claim any interest for the period for which he fails to obtain possession on account of his own laches.[10]

The present rule and S. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act make it clear that interest is payable on the "costs and charges and expenses" properly incurred by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage-security.[11]

(B) Post diem interest or interest after the date fixed in the mortgage deed for the payment of the mortgage-money.

The case law on this subject prior to the enactment of this rule may be summarized as follows: An intention to pay interest subsequent to the period fixed for redemption at the same rate as before might be implied in the absence of any agreement to the contrary.[13] Even if there was no intention to pay such interest, the Court could award it by way of damages for the breach of the contract to pay the mortgage-money at the stipulated time.[14] The contract rate of interest was ordinarily taken as the measure of damages,[15] though the Court could vary it if it considered it necessary.[16]

See the following cases which were decided in respect of money bonds:

Post diem interest at a reasonable rate might also be decreed under the Interest Act of 1839 though there might be no agreement to pay such interest.[17] Such interest awarded either as damages,[18] or under the Interest Act,[19] was held not to constitute a charge on the mortgaged property though a contrary view also was held in the undermentioned cases.[20] It was also held that post diem interest claimed as damages for breach of contract could be recovered only for the period prescribed by the Limitation Act for a suit for compensation for such breach,[21] and that a claim for such damages would fail unless the mortgage suit was brought within the period of limitation for a suit for damages for breach of the contract.[22] But the Privy Council observed in the undermentioned case[23] that the claim was a recurring one and so long as the principal itself was not barred, post diem interest could be recovered for the six years (or three years, as the case may be), preceding the suit on the mortgage.

(C) Interest from institution of suit to the date fixed under the preliminary decree for the payment of the mortgage-money.

The same rules which should guide the Court with reference to interest accruing prior to the suit apply also till the date fixed under the decree for the payment of the mortgage-money. Hence, where there is a stipulated rate of interest, the Court is ordinarily bound to decree interest at that rate till the date fixed for payment of the decretal amount, however high it may be, unless it is penal or is excessive and the transaction is substantially unfair.[24] But it has been held by the Federal Court that under this rule the Court has a discretion in awarding interest for the period after the institution of the suit and that it is not bound to award interest for such period at the contractual rate even though such rate may not be penal, excessive or substantially unfair.[25] The undermentioned decisions[26] to be contrary must, therefore, be held to be not good law. It has been held by the Patna High Court that under this rule, the Court cannot refuse interest for the period after the institution of the suit.[27] But the Allahabad High Court has held to the contrary.[28] As seen already under sub-heading (A) of this Note, the Sind Chief Court has held that a Court has discretion under this rule to refuse interest even for the period prior to the suit. Where the period originally fixed for payment is extended by the appellate Court or otherwise, the contract rate of interest is payable till the extended period.[29] Though the mortgagor pays into the Court the decretal amount before the date fixed in the decree for payment, he is bound to pay interest for the entire period fixed.[30]

The Calcutta High Court has held that the mortgagor is not entitled as of right to, nor is the Court bound to grant, interest at all for the period between the date of the decree and the date of redemption. It is only if interest is legally recoverable and the Court in its discretion deems fit to allow it that the interest has to be calculated at the agreed rate.[30a]

The words "principal amount found due or declared due on the mortgage" mean only the principal amount due under the mortgage without interest till date of suit. Therefore, a mortgagee is entitled to interest from the date of suit to the date fixed for payment at the contract rate only on the principal amount due under the mortgage and not on the total amount due on the date of suit.[31] But it has been held that where the interest has become part of the principal in accordance with the terms of the mortgage deed, the mortgagee is entitled to interest on such interest also.[32] See also the case cited below.[33]

(D) Interest from date fixed in the decree for payment till realization.

The Court can decree interest even for the period subsequent to the date fixed for payment in the decree till realization.[34] The scheme of the Code being that after the date fixed in the decrce for payment the relationship between the parties passes from the domain of contract into that of judgment, the Court is not bound to award interest, after such date, at the contract rate, but may award such interest at any rate that it considers reasonable.[35] The undermentioned cases[36] which held that the Court was bound to award the contract rate till payment are not good law.

Future interest after the date fixed for payment is to be paid on the aggregate of the principal, interest and costs awarded by the decree.[37] The present rule makes it clear that such future interest forms part of the mortgage-money and is not a simple money claim.[38] The proper stage for decreeing future interest is at the time of passing the final decree.[39] Subsequent interest not mentioned in the final decree must be taken as refused.[40] But an agreement between the parties for the payment of future interest may be given effect to though the final decree does not provide for it.[41] When future interest is decreed, it must be paid till the confirmation of the sale.[42]

In the matter of subsequent interest this rule has been modified by S. 31 of the Bengal Money Lenders Act, 1940. In the matter of, Pre-Act Loans S. 31 (a) imposes a ban on the exercise of discretion given under this rule and does not allow any interest at all. In the matter of Post-Act loans S. 31 (b) limits interest for both the periods, under R. 11 (a) and (b), to six per cent. per annum.[43]

R. 12. [New: Act IV of 1882, S. 96.] Where any property the sale of which is directed under this Order is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, direct that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold.

Sale of property subject to prior mortgage.

1. Transfer of Property Act, Section 96.— The present rule corresponds to the old S. 96 of the Transfer of Property Act of 1882 which was repealed in 1908. That section ran as follows:

> "96. If any property the sale of which is directed under this chapter is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, order that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold."

By the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act XX of 1929 a new S. 96 has been inserted in the Transfer of Property Act which deals with a different subject.

1a. Scope of the rule.— This rule confers upon the Court the power of directing a sale free from the prior mortgage subject to two conditions, namely, that the property must be one the sale of which is directed under this Order and there must be consent of the prior mortgagee. When these conditions are satisfied, the Court has full power in its discretion to direct the sale free from the prior mortgage.[1] The rule does not require the consent of the plaintiff or of anybody else besides that of the prior mortgagee.[2] Nor is it necessary that a decree for sale on the puisne mortgage must have been passed before this rule can apply. Hence this rule will enable the Court in a puisne mortgagee's suit to pass a preliminary decree for sale free from the prior mortgage, providing that the prior mortgagee should be paid first out of the sale proceeds.[3] But where a decree on a puisne mortgage is passed and such decree is satisfied by the mortgagor, a prior mortgagee although a defendant in the suit cannot thereafter come in under this rule and ask that the property be sold in order to discharge the debt due to him.[4] The right to apply under this rule is not confined to the plaintiff decree-holder. The Court can exercise the power under this rule on the application of anybody or even of its own motion.[5] But the rule does not contemplate an enquiry as to whether a stranger to the suit is a prior mortgagee or not. The rule contemplates the admitted existence of a prior mortgagee. Hence, where in the course of the execution proceedings, a stranger comes forward alleging himself to be a prior mortgagee and asking that the procedure under this rule should be applied to him, the Court cannot enter into any enquiry as to the existence of the prior mortgage and apply the procedure under this rule.[6]

O. 34 R. 1 makes it clear that the prior mortgagee is not a necessary party to a suit for a sale on the puisne mortgage. Hence, a puisne mortgagee can bring the mortgaged property to sale under his own decree subject to a prior mortgage.[1] The contrary view, taken in the undermentioned cases[2] decided under the Transfer of Property Act, is obsolete.

As to whether a person having two mortgages on the same property can sue on his puisne mortgage, reserving his rights under the first mortgage, see Notes on S. 67A in the commentaries on the Transfer of Property Act.

3. Sale free from prior mortgage.— The rule clearly implies that without the prior mortgagee's consent, property cannot be sold free of his mortgage, in execution of a decree for sale on a subsequent mortgage.[1] In the absence of such consent, the sale under a decree on a puisne mortgage can only be subject to the prior mortgage though there may be no express reservation of the prior mortgagee's rights.[2] Although the prior mortgagee may be joined as a party to the suit on the puisne mortgage, it is not incumbent on him to assert and prove his priority where his mortgage or his priority is not impugned. (See under sub-heading "suits by puisne mortgagee against the mortgagor and the prior mortgagee" in Note 40 on S. 11 of the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edn.) The priority, therefore, cannot be lost merely because the prior mortgagee does not establish it in such a case.[3]

See also the undermentioned cases.[4]

4. Where a prior mortgage is a usufructuary one.—(a) Sale free of prior mortgage— A usufructuary mortgagee, as such, cannot sue for sale on his mortgage. There is, therefore, a conflict of opinions as to whether a prior usufructuary mortgagee, with whose consent the property is sold under this rule in execution of a decree on a puisne mortgage, is entitled to share in the sale proceeds. The High Court of Madras[1] has held that he can, on the ground that this rule applies to all mortgages whether simple or usufructuary or whether the mortgages are in favour of the same person or different persons. The High Court of Allahabad,[2] on the other hand, has held that he cannot do so. It has, however, been held that where a puisne mortgagee redeems a prior usufructuary mortgagee, he can bring the mortgaged property to sale for the amounts due under both the mortgages.[3]

(b) Sale subject to prior mortgage— As to sale of mortgaged property subject to a prior usufructuary mortgage, See Note 2.

5. Sale by the Court subject to a charge.— A statement in a certificate of sale that the sale is subject to a charge is not conclusive against the purchaser when it is sought to enforce the charge by a suit.[1] A person who sells property subject to an encumbrance which has been recognized by the Court cannot claim a re-sale on the ground that the encumbrance has been found to be void.[2] Mortgages noted in the proclamation of sale as claims upon the property sold should not necessarily be entered in the certificate of sale or be computed as part of the purchase-money, unless the existence of the mortgages has been either admitted by the parties or established by a decree or declared under the Civil Procedure Code, O. 21 R. 62.[3] When a sale is subject to encumbrances, the vendor is no longer liable for their satisfaction nor is he entitled to any benefit that the vendee might obtain therefrom.[4]

R. 13. [New: Act IV of 1882, S. 97.] (1) Such proceeds shall be brought into Court and applied as follows:

first, in payment of all expenses incident to the sale or properly incurred in any attempted sale;

secondly, in payment of whatever is due to the prior mortgagee on account of the prior mortgage, and of costs, properly incurred in connection therewith;

thirdly, in payment of all interest due on account of the mortgage in consequence whereof the sale was directed, and of the costs of the suit in which the decree directing the sale was made;

fourthly, in payment of the principal money due on account of that mortgage; and lastly, the residue (if any) shall be paid to the person proving himself to be interested in the property sold, or if there are more such persons than one, then to such persons according to their respective interests therein or upon their joint receipt.

Nothing in this section or in S. 96 shall be deemed to affect the powers conferred by Section 57."

2. Application of proceeds.— Compare S. 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It has been held that although this rule in terms applies only when the sale is ordered under R. 12, i.e., when the sale is free of the prior mortgage, the principle of the rule applies also to cases of sales subject to a prior mortgage, and that even in such cases, the proceeds should first be applied towards the interest and costs of the mortgage under which the sale is held and then only towards the principal.[1] But the undermentioned decision[2] holds that where there is no prior mortgage and hence, there is no question of the applicability of this rule, the proceeds of sale must first be applied towards the principal and then to the interest and costs. This rule is intended to regulate the position as between the mortgagor and the mortgagee. It does not apply to a case of suretyship.[3]

Where a sale is held in enforcement of a prior mortgage, a puisne mortgagee receiving an amount from out of the surplus sale proceeds by virtue of his security is bound to apply them only in satisfaction of his mortgage-debt, though the mortgagor may have paid the money towards other debts.[4]

3. "Whatever is due to the prior mortgagee."— Each of the prior encumbrancers is entitled to interest at the contract rate up to the date of the confirmation of the sale, that being the earliest date when the money really becomes available for distribution.[1]

4. "Person proving himself to be interested in the property sold." —This expression includes a subsequent encumbrancer,[1] but does not include him if the existence or validity of the subsequent encumbrance is challenged by the mortgagor.[2] A subsequent mortgagee who has obtained a decree on his mortgage but has allowed it to become time-barred is not a person interested in the property sold.[3] It was held in the undermentioned case[4] that the holder of two successive mortgages on the same property, who failed to include the second mortgage in his suit on the first mortgage, could claim the surplus sale proceeds under this rule as a puisne encumbrancer. That position will, it is conceived, be different in cases governed by S. 67A of the Transfer of Property Act which has been newly introduced by Act XX of 1929. A mere unsecured creditor is not a person "interested in the property sold." But after the subsequent encumbrances are satisfied, he can proceed against the balance, if any, payable to the mortgagor.[5]

5. Appeal or Revision.— No appeal lies against an order passed under this rule. A revision also will not lie in a large majority of cases as no question of law will probably be involved. If however the order under this rule is found prejudicial it might be possible for the parties to take action under S. 151 Civil P. C.[1]

1. ('42) 1942 Aj. M. L. J. 51 (52), Kanwal Nain Hamir Singh v. Pan Mal Lodha.

1. Transfer of Property Act, Section 99.— This rule corresponds to S. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, which ran as follows:

"99. Where a mortgagee in execution of a decree for the satisfaction of any claim, whether arising under the mortgage or not, attaches the mortgaged property, he shall not be entitled to bring such property to sale otherwise than by instituting a suit under S. 67, and he may institute such suit notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, section 43."

The following difference may be noted, namely, that while S. 99 applied even to cases in which the mortgagee had obtained a money decree on a claim unconnected with the mortgage, R. 14 is expressly confined to cases where a money decree has been obtained on a claim arising under the mortgage. See Note 12.

2. Scope and object of the rule.— As has been seen in Note 19 on Rule 5, a sale in execution of a decree on a mortgage passes the interests of both the mortgagor and the mortgagee, while a sale in execution of a money decree conveys only the interest of the mortgagor, namely the equity of redemption. The object of the present rule is to prevent the mortgagee from bringing to sale the bare equity of redemption in execution of a money decree which he may obtain in respect of a claim arising under the mortgage.[1] Thus, where a mortgagee obtains a simple money decree for the interest that has accrued due on the mortgage, or obtains a money decree for the mortgage-debt undr S. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, he cannot attach and sell the mortgaged properties in execution of the said decree though he can proceed against the person or other properties of the mortgagor. If he wants to proceed against the mortgaged properties he is bound to bring a suit for sale again, and such a suit will not be barred by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, Order 2, Rule 2.

The reason of the rule is the avoidance of several evils which are likely to result if a mortgagee is allowed to bring the mortgaged properties to sale in execution of a money decree which he has obtained on a claim arising under the mortgage.[2] Such a sale would deprive the mortgagor summarily of the right of redemption without giving him any of the facilities which an ordinary suit for sale ensures. Being subject to the unascertained claim of the mortgagee, the property would not fetch a fair value at the sale and the mortgagee would be enabled to purchase it at an unduly low price. If a stranger purchased it at the sale without notice of the mortgage he would be subjected to great hardship unless the mortgagee could be held to be estopped from asserting his rights under the mortgage against such a purchaser.[3]

Apart from the statutory provisions contained in this rule and S. 90 of the Trusts Act, there is no general prohibition against a mortgagee purchasing the mortgaged property at a compulsory sale, such as a sale in execution or for arrears of revenue. Thus, there is nothing to prevent a puisne mortgagee from purchasing the mortgaged property at a sale in execution of a decree on the prior mortgage. A purchase by the mortgagee of the mortgaged property at a sale for arrears of revenue is similarly not open to any objection where the default in the payment of the revenue has in no way been due to him.[4] The rule is retrospective in effect being a rule of procedure, and applies to decrees passed even prior to its coming into force.[5]

The rule is intended for the benefit of the mortgagor[6] and so it is open to him to waive the benefit of the rule. When he has thus waived the benefit of the rule, it is not for third parties to object under this rule, to the sale of the properties. Thus, where the mortgagor has agreed to the sale of the properties in execution of a money decree obtained by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage amount, another creditor of the mortgagor who has attached the properties in execution of his own decree cannot object under this rule to the sale of the properties.[7] See also Note 14.

The rule does not preclude a suit for money in respect of a claim arising under the mortgage. The rule only precludes the sale of the mortgaged property in execution of the decree obtained in such suit.[8] It has been held by the Bombay High Court that the rule does not apply to a sale held by the revenue authorities under S. 86 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code at the instance of the mortgagee.[9]

The rule does not apply to the Punjab, the Transfer of Property Act not having been extended thereto.[10] See sub-rule (2). See also the undermentioned cases.[11]

When S. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act was in force, it was held that the section applied to Civil Courts and Revenue Courts.[12] It was also held that the section applied to mortgages created before the Transfer of Property Act,[13] but not to judicial sales held and perfected before the date of the Act.[14]

The rule prevents only a sale of the mortgaged property under a money decree in respect of a claim arising under the mortgage. It does not prevent the attachment of the mortgaged property under such a decree. See Note 9.

3. Applicability of the rule to the enforcement of a charge.— By force of Rule 15, this rule applies to charges as well as to mortgages.[1] It applies, however, only to a charge which exists prior to the decree for money and not to one which is created for the first time by the decree as in the latter case the decree cannot be said to be obtained in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage. See Note 6. In such a case, therefore, the charge can be enforced in execution without any fresh suit for sale being filed.[2] Thus, where, in a suit for maintenance by a Hindu widow, the maintenance decreed is made a charge on certain property, the widow can enforce the charge by applying for sale of the property in execution and cannot be compelled to file a suit for sale.[3] As to the right of the decree-holder to proceed against the other properties of the judgment-debtor, see Notes on Order 34 Rule 15.

4. Applicability of the rule to the enforcement of security bonds.— Under S. 145 of the Code, the liability of a surety for a judgment-debtor can be enforced summarily in execution proceedings, in so far as the surety has made himself personally liable. But, suppose, besides making himself personally liable, he mortgages some property as security. Can the property be sold in execution without a suit for sale? On this question, there is a conflict of decisions. It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad,[1] Bombay,[2] Madras[3] and Patna[4] that this rule does not apply to such a case as there is no decree for money against the surety within the meaning of this rule and that therefore the property can be sold without resort to a suit for sale. But the High Court of Calcutta[5] has held that the rule applies and is an absolute bar to the sale of the mortgaged property without a regular suit for sale. See also the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th (1944) Edn., section 145, Note 8.

Where the security bond is given to the Court and not to any named person, there is no mortgage, the Court not being a juridical person and the proper procedure to enforce the security is by a summary order for the sale of the property covered by the bond, unless the surety pays the amount of security within a specified date.[6]

Where a money decree is ordered to be paid in instalments on the judgment-debtor executing a security bond hypothecating immovable property for the satisfaction of the decree and default is committed in the payment of instalments, the hypothecated property can be sold in execution of the decree and a fresh suit is not necessary. The reason is that the hypothecation being made after the money decree, such decree is not one in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage.[7]

5. "Mortgagee," meaning of, under this rule.— "Mortgagee" includes the holder of a charge. See Note 3.

6. "Decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage."— Section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act applied though the claim on which the money decree was obtained was totally unconnected with the mortgage. The present rule applies only to cases in which a money decree is obtained on a claim arising under the mortgage.[1] For further information on this aspect of the subject, See Note 12. It follows from the language of the rule that the mortgage should be one existing prior to the decree and not one created by the decree itself.[2] The rule also presupposes that the mortgage is valid and enforceable at the time of the passing of the money decree. If the mortgage is invalid or has become unenforceable through the efflux of time, or any other reason, the rule does not apply and is no bar to the sale of the property under the money decree.[3] But a mere statement by the mortgagee that he gives up the mortgage right will not put an end to the mortgage so as to make this rule not applicable.[4]

The rule refers to a simple money suit because it is only in such a case that there can be any question of bringing another suit for sale on the mortgage. Thus, where a mortgagee sues for sale in respect of a part of the mortgaged property and after the sale of such part in execution of the decree in the suit obtains a personal decree under O. 34 R. 6, such a decree can be executed by sale of the exempted part of the mortgaged property. The reason is that in such a case the suit for sale has already been brought and a fresh suit for sale in respect of the exempted portion would be barred under the Civil Procedure Code, Order 2 Rule 2.[5]

7. Effect of sale in contravention of the rule.— A sale in contravention of the rule can be prevented by an objection being taken at any time before the sale takes place.[1] But if it does actually take place, it is not void but is only voidable at the instance of the mortgagor or of any other person having an interest in the equity of redemption.[2] The contrary view held in the undermentioned cases[3] cannot be considered to be good law. The proper remedy to set aside a sale held in contravention of the rule is by an application under S. 47 of the Code and not by a separate suit.[4] The application should be made before the confirmation of the sale. After the sale has been confirmed, it cannot be set aside unless owing to fraud or other reasons the mortgagor was kept in ignorance of the sale proceedings prior to the sale.[5] Where the sale is held after due notice to the judg-

Once the sale is confirmed, the purchaser gets a good title to the property and is not liable to be redeemed subsequently by the mortgagor.[7] The fact that the mortgagee himself has purchased the property with the leave of the Court makes no difference.[8] In the undermentioned cases,[9] however, it was held that if the mortgagee himself is the purchaser, the mortgagor's right of redemption is not affected. It is submitted that the latter view is not correct for two reasons—

(1) Section 60 of the Transfer of Property Act recognizes the possibility of the extinguishment of the equity of redemption by its becoming vested in the mortgagee, and,

(2) a decree-holder who buys with the leave of the Court is in the same position as any other purchaser.

Section 47 and O. 21 R. 92, Civil Procedure Code, do not apply to persons who are not parties to the sale proceedings and therefore such persons can object to the sale by a separate suit even subsequent to its confirmation.[10]

A sale of the mortgaged property in execution of a money decree is subject to the encumbrances covering the property at the time inasmuch as only the mortgagor's interest passes at such a sale.[11] (Compare the undermentioned cases,[12] decided prior to the Transfer of Property Act, in which it was held that the mortgagee's interest also passed at such a sale.)

But a mortgagee decree-holder who, while bringing the mortgaged property to sale under a money decree, fails to disclose his mortgage, is stopped from asserting his rights under the mortgage against an innocent auction-purchaser.[13]

An application for sale made in contravention of R.14 is not one in accordance with law within the meaning of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act. See the A. I. R. Commentaries on the Limitation Act, 2nd (1942) Edn., Art. 182, Note 52.

9. Attachment of the property is not prohibited.— The rule prohibits only the sale of the mortgaged property under a money decree for the mortgage-debt.

13. See O. 21 R. 66 Note 11.

The rule does not preclude the mere attachment of the property in execution of such a decree.[1]

10. Transferee of money decree from mortgagee, if bound by the restrictions against the mortgagee.— Under S. 49 of the Code a transferee of a decree in respect of a claim arising under the mortgage holds it subject to the equities which the judgment-debtor might have enforced against the decree-holder. Hence, the transferee of a money decree obtained by the mortgagee in respect of such a claim is bound by the restrictions imposed by this rule against the mortgagee.[1] The transferee of a money decree, not in respect of the mortgage, obtained by the mortgagee against his mortgagor, is not barred under this rule, from selling the judgment-debtor's equity of redemption. See Note 11.

11. "Otherwise than by instituting a suit."— As has been seen in Note 2, the effect of this rule is that where a mortgagee has obtained a simple money decree on his mortgage, he cannot bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of such decree but must file a separate suit for sale in enforcement of the mortgage and such a suit would not be barred despite the provisions of the Civil Procedure, Code, O. 2 R. 2.[1] A decree in a suit on the mortgage bond, which does not provide for the sale of the mortgaged property, is only a simple money decree though it may declare the existence of a lien on the property covered by the bond.[2] On the other hand, a decree on a mortgage bond which, though not drawn up in the form prescribed for a decree for sale, yet provides for the sale of the property in case of default by the mortgagor, is not a simple money decree and Rule 14 is no bar to the sale of the mortgaged property in execution thereof.[3]

[See ('09) 3 Ind Cas 999 (1000) (Cal).]

The rule applies also to usufructuary mortgages. When the mortgagee has obtained a money decree for the mortgage amount in such a case, he cannot bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of the decree. He must bring a suit for sale for that purpose. He can bring such a suit though, if he had not obtained a money decree for the mortgage amount, he could not have done so, on account of the mortgage being a usufructuary one.[4]

Where a mortgagee has given up all his rights under the mortgage, the rule is no bar to the sale of the mortgaged property in execution of a money decree for the mortgage debt.[5] See Note 6.

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court[6] that the rule does not apply to a suit for contribution brought by a co-mortgagor who has redeemed the entire mortgage and claims a charge on the shares of the other cosharers for the proportionate amounts due by them. The reason given is that such a suit is not a mere suit for money but a development of the suit on the mortgage.

Under the Civil Procedure Code, O. 33 R. 13 and S. 47, the charge which the Government has on the subject-matter of the suit for the court-fee payable in cases where the plaintiff has been allowed to sue as a pauper is enforceable by proceedings in execution and not by a separate suit.[7]

12. Sale of mortgaged property for claim unconnected with the mortgage.— Section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act prohibited a sale of the mortgaged property in execution of a money decree obtained by the mortgagee although the decree was upon a claim unconnected with the mortgage.[1] The present rule applies only if the decree for money is in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage and not to a decree on a claim unconnected with the mortgage.[2] A fortiori there is no bar to the sale of the mortgaged property in execution of a money decree obtained by a third person or to the mortgagee purchasing the property at such a sale.[3] Even S. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act was no bar to such

The following are cases showing what are and what are not "claims arising under the mortgage":

(1) Where a usufructuary mortgagee grants a lease of the property to the mortgagor, a claim for rent accruing under the lease is not a claim arising under the mortgage[6] unless the lease formed part of the mortgage transaction.[7] The undermentioned decisions[8] proceed on the view that the claim for rent in such a case would be one arising under the mortgage apart from any question of the lease and the mortgage being parts of the same transaction

2. ('81) 3 All 297 (302, 303). (Second suit also was not barred by res judicata.)

Even after the execution of the decree for money has become time-barred, the mortgagee can sue for sale under this rule.[3]

If, however, the prior decree was a decree providing for sale of the mortgaged property though not strictly drawn up in the form prescribed for a decree for sale, this rule does not apply and a second suit for sale is barred by res judicata.[4] See Note 11. Similarly, if the mortgagee sues for sale but is content to take only a simple money decree he cannot subsequently sue again for sale. Such a suit will also be barred by res judicata. The exemption in this rule is only from the Civil Procedure Code, O. 2 R. 2 and not from section 11.[5]

Further, this rule relieves the mortgagee only from the restrictions imposed by the Civil Procedure Code, O. 2 R. 2 on the splitting of remedies. The restriction as to splitting of claims is not affected by it.[6] Thus, a suit for interest alone brought at a time when the principal also had become due is a bar to a subsequent suit for the principal.[7]

14. Consent decree.— This rule does not apply to cases in which a decree for money is passed against the mortgagor by consent. The reason is that the benefit under the rule is intended only for the mortgagor, and so he can waive it by consenting to a money decree being passed for the mortgage amount.[1]

15. "Decree,"— An order directing a surety for a judgment-debtor to pay the amount secured is not a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of this rule and hence, the rule does not preclude the sale of the property covered by the security bond, by proceeding in execution without a suit for sale being filed.[1] See Note 4. Although a decree providing for the sale of the equity of redemption for arrears of interest due under the mortgage is contrary to the provisions of S. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, it cannot be objected to in execution.[2] See Note 7.

Mortgages by the deposit of title-deeds and charges.

[a]R. 15. [New.] All the provisions contained in this Order which apply to a simple mortgage shall, so far as may be, apply to a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds within the meaning of section 58, and to a charge within the meaning of section 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

[Cf. S. 96 of Act IV of 1882.]

a. Substituted by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act (XXI of 1929), Section 7, for the original Rule 15.

Provincial Amendment

OUDH

Read the present Rule 15 as Rule 15 (1) and add as sub-rule (2), the following:

"(2) Where a decree orders payment of money and charges it on immovable property on default of payment, the amount can be realized by sale of that property in execution of that very decree."

1. Amendments after 1908.— The rule has been substituted for the old R. 15 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929. The main changes effected in the rule are—

(1) The words "which apply to a simple mortgage" have been substituted for the words "as to the sale or redemption of the mortgaged property."

(2) The words "mortgage by deposit of title-deeds within the meaning of S. 58" are new.

2. Scope of the rule.— By force of this O. 34 R. 6 applies also to suits to enforce charges.[1] Similarly, under Rule 14, if the charge-holder first sues and obtains a money decree for a claim arising under the charge, a second suit for sale in enforcement of the charge will not be barred by the Civil Procedure Code, O. 2 R. 2.[2] The rule makes the provisions of the Code apply only so far as may be. Hence, where a charge is declared by a decree, which in its terms is final and itself provides for the sale of the properties in case of default, no fresh final decree is necessary.[3] In the undermentioned case[3a] where the decretal amount was declared to be a charge on certain properties but no decree either preliminary or final was passed for sale of the charged properties it was held that the decree operated only as a money decree together with a declaration of charge upon the properties and the sale of the properties in execution of the decree was therefore in contravention of this rule.

The effect of a decree on a charge is the same as that of a decree on a mortgage.[4]

3. Charge.— See the Commentaries on the Transfer of Property Act, Section 100, Note 15.

4. Creation of charge by operation of law.—See, ibid, Section 100, Note 11.

9. Right of maintenance.— See, ibid, Section 100, Note 30.

10. Claim for dower.— See, ibid, Section 100, Note 31.

10a. Charge created by decree.— This rule applies only to a charge within the meaning of S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act. As has been seen in the Commentaries on the Transfer of Property Act, S. 100, Note 28 there is a conflict of opinions as to whether a charge created by a decree is one within the meaning of S. 100.

Where a decree orders the payment of money and also creates a charge on certain properties, the effect is not to negative the right of the decree-holder to proceed against the other properties of the judgment-debtor unless such a right is expressly or by necessary implication excluded by the terms of the decree.[1] Such a decree itself amounts to a personal decree and no fresh personal decree is necessary in such a case.[2] Further according to the undermentioned decisions,[3] it is not necessary that the decree-holder should proceed in the first instance only against the properties which have been specifically charged. But the contrary view was taken in the cases noted below[4] in which it was held that the decree-holder could not proceed against the other properties unless he had first exhausted his remedies against the properties charged. It will be noticed that such a decree is not an ordinary decree for sale under Rules 4 and 5 of this Order and the provisions of Rule 6 cannot, therefore, apply to such a case.[5] The question of the liability of other properties and the manner of proceeding against them is, therefore, one of construction of the decree in each case.[6] Where a decree for maintenance is passed charging several properties the Court can regulate the order in which the properties should be proceeded against. The Court has the same power in such cases as it has got in executing a mortgage decree for sale.[7] (See Order 34 Rule 4, Note 10.)

11. Mortgage by deposit of title deeds.— See the Transfer of Property Act, Ss. 58 and 96. Section 96 of that Act makes the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act as to simple mortgages applicable to mortgages by deposit of title deeds. Similarly, the present rule makes the provisions of O. 34, which are applicable to simple mortgages, applicable also to mortgages by deposit of title deeds.

12. Charges enforceable by sale.— As the remedy of a simple mortgagee is only to sue for sale of the mortgaged property, so the charge-holder's remedy is also to sue for sale. But if the sale proceeds of the property charged are not sufficient to satisfy the charge and if the balance is legally recoverable from the debtor's other properties or from him personally, then a personal decree may be obtained under R. 6. See Note 2. The general principle that at a sale under a mortgage decree, the auction-purchaser takes the security free of the mortgage does not apply in the case of a recurring charge. In such a case even though the charged property may be sold in execution of a decree for arrears already accrued, the liability in respect of future payments will ordinarily remain after the sale and the property in the hands of the auction-purchaser will be subject to the charge in respect of such payments.[1]

13. Charge on the surplus sale proceeds of sale for arrears of revenue or rent.— See Notes on S. 73 in the Commentaries on the Transfer of Property Act.

APPENDIX II.

[a]THE BENGAL LAND (CONDITIONAL SALES) REGULATION, 1798.

Bengal Regulation I OF 1798.

(9th January, 1798.)

A Regulation to prevent fraud and injustice in conditional sales of land under deeds of bai-bil-wafa or other deeds of the same nature.

Preamble.

1. It has been long a prevalent practice in the Province of Bihar to borrow money on the mortgage and conditional sale of landed property, under a stipulation that, if the sum borrowed be not repaid (with or without interest) by a fixed period, the sale shall become absolute. This species of transfer has, in the above province, been usually denominated bai-bil-wafa; and the same transaction is common in Bengal, under an instrument termed kat-kabala.

It doubtless exists also under deeds of the above or similar denominations in Orissa and Benares: and since the promulgation of the rules respecting interest contained in Regulation XV, 1793[b] it has become more prevalent, particularly in the Province of Bihar, wherein instances have occurred in which persons lending money on bai-bil-wafa, in order to render the sale absolute, and thereby possess themselves of the landed property of the borrower, have denied the tender or evaded receiving payment of the money due to them within the period limited for the discharge of it.

In such cases, the proof of the tender falls on the borrower; and, if he fail in the proof of it for want of legal evidence, he is liable to lose his estate.

It is necessary therefore for the security of the borrower, in such transactions, that he should have the means of establishing before a Court of Judicature his having tendered, or being ready to pay, within the stipulated period, the amount due from him to the lender; who, if he mean to act fairly, will also derive a benefit from a clear rule being laid down, whereby it may be readily ascertained whether the borrower was willing to redeem his property by the payment of the money lent upon it within the period agreed upon between the parties, or whether, from his having omitted to perform the conditions of such redemption, the sale is become absolute and the property included therein finally transferred to the lender.

For the above purpose, and for the prevention of other abuses in the transactions referred to, the Central Government has passed the following rules, to be considered in force in the Provinces of Bengal, Bihar, Orissa and Benares, from the date of the receipt of this Regulation by the several Courts respectively.

Procedure for borrower of money on conditional sale of land who desires to redeem it by paying money lent.

2. In all instances of the loan of money on bai-bil-wafa, or on the conditional sale of landed property, as explained in the preamble to this Regulation, however denominated, the borrower, who may be desirous to redeem his land by the payment of the money lent upon it, with any interest due thereon, within the stipulated period, is at liberty, on or before the date stipulated, either to tender and pay to the lender the amount due to him, taking such precautions as he may think necessary to establish such tender and payment, if evaded or denied, or without any tender to the lender, to deposit the amount due to him, on or before the stipulated date, in the Diwani Adalat of the city or zila in which the land may be situated; and the Judge receiving the same shall furnish the party with a written receipt for the amount, specifying on what date, and for what purpose, such deposit may have been made, a. The whole of Reg. I of 1798, except such parts as relate to interest, was declared to be in force in the Punjab by the Punjab Laws Act, 1872 (IV of 1872), S. 3 and Sch. I.

b. Regulation XV of 1793 was repealed by the Repealing Act. 1868 [(VIII of 1868), S. I and Schedule.]

He shall also at the same time cause a written notice of such deposit to be delivered to the lender; and on the application of the latter, and his surrender of the conditional bill of sale, or showing satisfactory cause why it cannot be surrendered, shall pay him the amount deposited, and take his acknowledgment, to remain among the records of the Court.

That there may be no doubt to what amount the deposit in question is to be made, it is required to be as follows:—

When the lender has not obtained possession of the lands, the deposit is to be the principal sum lent, with the stipulated interest thereon, not exceeding the legal rate of twelve per cent. per annum, or, if interest be payable and no rate has been stipulated, with interest at the established rate of twelve per cent.; but, if the lender has held possession of the land, the principal sum borrowed only need be deposited, leaving the interest to be settled on an adjustment of the lender's receipts and disbursements during the period he has been in possession.

In either case, a deposit, made as above required, shall be considered to preserve to the borrower his full right of redemption; and, if the land be in the possession of the lender, shall entitle him to demand the immediate recovery thereof, subject to the adjustment of accounts specified in the following section:

Provided however that, if the borrower in any case shall deposit a less sum than above required, alleging that the sum so deposited is the total amount due to the lender for principal and interest, after deducting the proceeds of the lands in his possession, or otherwise, such deposit shall be received and notice given to the lender as above directed; and if the amount so deposited be admitted by the lender, or be established on investigation, to be the total amount due to him, the right of redemption shall be considered to have been fully preserved to the borrower, who will not however in such cases be entitled to the recovery of his lands, until it be admitted or established that he has paid the full amount due from him.

When lender has possessed land, and adjustment of accounts is necessary, he is to account for proceeds of estate.

3. In all instances wherein the lender on a bai-bil-wafa, or similar conditional sale, may have been put in possession of the land, and an adjustment of accounts may consequently become necessary between him and the borrower, the lender is to account to the borrower for the proceeds of the estate whilst in his possession, on the principles prescribed with regard to mortgages and interest in Regulation XV, 1793, as far as the same may be applicable to the nature of the case.

But such part of section 10 of the above Regulation as directs that the mortgages therein referred to are to be considered as cancelled and redeemed whenever the principal sum, with the simple interest due upon it, shall have been realised from the usufruct of the mortgaged property, or otherwise liquidated by the mortgagee, being inapplicable to the conditional sales referred to in this regulation, it is hereby declared not to apply thereto.

Tips not to be considered legal tender unless accepted by lender.

4. A tip for the repayment of money lent on the conditional sales referred to in this Regulation shall not be considered a legal tender unless accepted as such by the lender; the proof of which acceptances shall be the lender's giving up the bill of sale, or giving a written acknowledgment that he has received back the money lent by him.

Regulation not to alter contract between parties.

5. Nothing in this Regulation being intended to alter the terms of contract settled between the parties in the transactions to which it refers (illegal interest excepted), the several provisions in it are to be construed accordingly, and any question of right between the parties is to be regularly brought before and determined by the Courts of Civil Justice.

GLOSSARY.

The following abbreviations are used in this Glossary:

A.—Arabic. Ben.—Bengali. Fr.—French. Guz.—Guzerati. H. Hindi. Kan.—Kannada. L.— Latin. Mal.— Malayalam. Mar.— Marathi. P.—Persian. S.—Sanskrit. Tam.—Tamil. Tel.—Telugu.

Abadi (H.)

That part of the village land which is set apart for residences, shops, etc.

From the beginning.

Abkari (H.)

Revenue derived from taxes on the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors and drugs—See ('17) 4 AIR 1917 Mad 852 (852): 34 Ind Cas 927.

Absolute estate

A full and complete estate. The transfer of an absolute estate passes to the transferee an interest which is unlimited in estate and unfettered in respect of any condition or trust.

Absolute transfer.

Where a grant carries with it all the legal incidents thereof it is an absolute transfer. Thus a transfer is absolute where it is made without imposing any restrictions or conditions in respect of the legal incidents of the property transferred. This expression is to be distinguished from the expression 'transferred absolutely.' For an interest which is transferred absolutely is not the same thing as the transfer of an absolute estate in the property. Any interest e.g. a life estate, may be created absolutely by not imposing any conditions or restrictions qualifying its legal incidents.

Abwab (H.)

Tax imposed in addition to the regular assessment on the land.

Acceleration—Rule of

To accelerate means to quicken, to make haste or to shorten. Acceleration in its technical sense means the shortening of the time for the vesting in possession of a subsequent interest on the failure of a prior interest. The rule of acceleration may be stated thus: Where an interest created on a transfer of property is intended to take effect upon the failure of the prior interest created by the same transaction, such interest will take effect upon the failure of the prior interest in any manner. The effect of failure of a prior life interest is to accelerate the subsequent interests which are limited to take effect on the regular determination of that prior interest.

Accessio (L.)

Accession credit principle (L.)

The increase follows the principal.

Accession

In its restricted sense, in which it is generally used in law, it means the mode of acquiring every accessory thing, whether corporeal or incorporeal, that has been added to a principal thing from without, and has been connected with the principal thing, whether by powers of nature or by the will of man, so that in virtue of this connection, it is regarded as part and parcel of the principal thing. It must be remembered that the expression 'accession' is not confined to physical acquisitions or additions to the property but also includes the acquisition of an interest in property. (See S. 63 Note 1, S. 70 Note 2 and S. 108 (d) Note 1.)

Accessorium non ducit sed sequitur suum principale (L.)

The accessary right does not lead, but follows its principals. (See S. 8 Notes 2, 12; S. 63 Note 1).

Accretion

The increase or extension of the boundaries, or the acquisition, of land by the gradual or imperceptible action of natural soil from the sea or a river, or by a gradual recession of the water from the usual watermark. In accretion the added land belongs to the owner of land to which land belongs to the owner of the land to which it is added.

For the distinction between the English and the Indian law on the accretion to land by alluvion, see S. 108 (d) Note 2.

Accruing debt

See S. 3 Notes 26 and 27.

Accumulation

The increase of a fund or property by the continuous addition to it of the interest or income of it. Section 17 of the T. P. Act lays down a provision as to the direction for accumulation of the income arising from the property transferred. It prescribes the limits beyond which a direction for accumulation of the income will be void. These limits are, (a) the life of the transferor, or (b) a period of eighteen years from the date of the transfer.

Acquiescence

See S. 51 Notes 22 and 23.

Actionable claim

See S. 3 for definition.

Actual or positive fraud
See S. 34 Note 3.

The tenure created by an under-letting in the second degree is termed dar-patni (or lease within lease); and a third under-letting is denominated seh-patni (from the Persian seh, three). Power of appointment
Under the English law an executory interest was any interest in land which was not a reversion or a remainder. Executory interests were frequently created by means of powers of appointment: that is, by giving to some person the right to take the land away from one set of persons and give it to others. A power is a capacity given to a person to dispose of a greater estate in the land than he himself possesses. Powers are either (1) general powers, or (2) special powers.

GENERAL POWERS are those where the donee of the power can appoint the land to any one without restriction. For example: A grants land to such persons as B shall appoint by deed or by his will. B is called the 'appointor,' or 'donee of the power,' and he can 'appoint' or give the land to any one he likes, including himself. Until B makes the appointment he has no estate or interest in the land; but he can, at any moment, by executing a deed, vest the fee simple in himself.

SPECIAL POWERS are those where the donee of the power can only appoint the land to one or more of the members of a certain class of persons. Thus, land may be given by a marriage settlement to the husband for life, with remainder to such of the children of the marriage as the husband shall by will appoint. The husband can then give the land by his will to any of his children; but he cannot give it to any person who is not his child. The children are said to be the 'object of the power.' Real property

The word real in English law is used, not in its common sense, in which it is opposed to sham, or imaginary, or ideal, but principally to convey the notion of the capability of specific restitution. The terms real and personal were first applied to actions; and were afterwards extended to things and property with the meanings which they had acquired in connection with actions. If the estate was a fee simple or fee tail or an estate which might last for an uncertain length of time, e.g., an estate for the life of a tenant, and if the services rendered by the tenant were considered free, then his holding was a freehold, and his rights were protected in the King's Court. A tenant of a freehold who was ejected by his landlord or any other person could bring an action to recover the land itself, i.e., the 'res' or 'thing' of which he had been deprived; the action was called a real action, and the property which could be recovered was real property.

While describing the growth in England of the Civil Law in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, Radcliffe and Cross remark, "A very frequent classification—and one which has left a deep mark on our law—was that into real actions, personal actions and mixed actions. In the first the plaintiff claimed—and if he was successful would recover—a specific object of property (a 'res'). In a personal action, on the other hand, the plaintiff sought to enforce a general claim to compensation in damages from the defendant, while in a mixed action he could claim alternatively either specific restitution or damages. Broadly speaking, the only objects of property which were recoverable in specie in the developed common law system were estates of freehold in land. The actions by which title to such estates could be asserted were the 'real actions' par excellence, and the estates themselves came in consequence to be called 'real property.'" PREAMBLE

Add in the Foot Note indicated :

4. 1953 Pat 193 (A I R V 40 C 64 Pr 3) (DB). Lachhminarayan v. Janmaijai Mahton. (It purports to do no more than to define and amend certain parts of the law relating to transfer of property.) ✣ ('50) 86 Cal L Jour 198 (205), Sm. Durgarani Devi v. Mohiuddin. (Act provides for some and not all consequences of assignment of reversion.)

Add after Pt. 10 as a separate para :

[Pt. 11] It is erroneous to suppose that every provision in the Transfer of Property Act and every amendment effected is necessarily based on the principles of justice, equity and good conscience. Before applying the provisions of this Act to cases not falling under it, on the ground of justice, equity and good conscience, it has to be seen in every case whether the particular provision of the Act relied upon restates a known rule of equity or whether it is merely a new rule laid down by the Legislature without reference to any rule of equity and what is the true nature and character of the rule. 1953 SC 228 (AIR V 40 C 55 P 17) = 1953 S C R 1009 (SC), Namdeo Lokman Ladhi v. Narmadabai.

Note 6

Add after Pt. 1 :

[Pt. 1a] The English decisions may be referred to, in cases where the Act is silent and also in cases where are there specific provisions in the Act, for a proper understanding of such provisions. ('50) 86 Cal L Jour 198 (206), Sm. Durgarani Devi v. Mohiuddin.

SECTION 1

In Section 1,

(i) for third para the following shall be substituted :—

'It extends in the first instance to the whole of India except Part B States, Bombay, Punjab and Delhi.'

—Substituted by A. L. O. 1950.

(ii) In the fourth para of S. 1,

(a) the words "Bombay, Punjab and Delhi", were substituted for the words 'the said Provinces' and the word 'State' for the word 'Provincial', by A. L. O. 1950.

(b) for the words 'Bombay, Punjab and Delhi' the words 'the said States', shall be substituted.

—Substituted by the part B States (Laws) Act, III of 1951, (S. 3 and Sch.).

(iii) In para five of S. 1,

For the word 'Provincial' occurring twice in the para the word 'State' shall be substituted.

—Substituted by A. L. O. 1950.

On page 171,

(i) after the para beginning with the words "Act IV of 1882" and ending with "See ibid, p. 195", add the following :—

'It has also been extended to the whole of Hyderabad State from 17-7-52 (vide Hyderabad Gaz., D/- 17-7-52, Pt. 1-D, P. 718), to the whole of the State of Mysore from 1-10-1951 (vide Mysore Gaz., D/- 20-9-1951, Pt. IV S. 1-c, p. 453), to the whole of the State of Rajasthan from 1-2-1952 (vide Rajasthan Gaz. D/- 5-7-52, Pt. IV-A p. 185) and the whole State of Travancore-Cochin from 1-5-1952 (vide Travancore-Cochin Gaz., D/- 1-4-1952-Pt. 1 p. 356.)"

(ii) To the para beginning with "The Act has been declared" and ending with "(1 of 1929)", add the following :—

"It has also been declared to be in force in Saurashtra from 28-8-1951 (vide Saurashtra Gaz., D/- 28-8-1951 Pt. III Extra, p. 884.)"

Add in Synopsis after heading 5 ;

"5A. Applicability of principles to matters expressly excluded from purview of the Act."

Note 1

Add in the Foot Note indicated :

1. See 1950 Kutch 64 (A I R V 37 C 53 P 7, 9), Gangabai Ratonshi v. Malbai. (Act not applicable in Kutch and cannot be literally followed —Kutch Shirasta Sangraha (Collection of Customs) often prevailed over Indian Act in matter of transfer of property.)

Note 3a

Add after Pt. 1 :

[Pt. 2] But it was held in the following case that the Transfer of Property Act does not apply to the pre-emption chapter of the Berar Land Revenue Code. 1949 Nag 34 (A I R V 36 C 17 P 9)=I L R (1948) Nag 327 (DB), Jainarayan Ramkisan v. Motiram Gangaram.

Note 5

Add in the Foot Note indicated :

1. See however 1951 Trav-Co 17 (AIR V 38 C 7 P 5) (DB), Varaha Devaswom v. Umer Sait. (T. P. Act came into force in Cochin on 1-1-1112—Mortgage transaction in State prior to passing of T. P. Act - Rights and liabilities are to be determined in accordance with common law.)

Note 5A

Add after Note 5 :

5A. Applicability of principles to matters expressly excluded from purview of the Act.

[Pt. 1] The assistance of the Act as a guide on matters which have been excluded from the purview of the Act by express words should not be invoked, unless the provisions of the Act embody principles of general application. 1953 S C 228 (A I R V 40 C 55 Pr 22) : 1953 S C R 1009 (S C), Namdeo Lokman Lodhi v. Narmadabai. (1919 Mad .2 [AIR V 6] Krisha Shetty v. Gilbert Pinto, Approved.)

[Pt. 2] Section 2 (d) clearly excludes the application of the provisions of S. 105 to the relationship which has been created by a decree. But the provisions of S. 105 can be invoked as matters of justice, equity and good conscience. 1954 Bom 370 (AIR V 41 C 107 Pr 16) : I L R (1954) Bom 615 (DB), Ramjibhai Virpal v. Gordhandas Maganlal.

See also Preamble N. 2.

SECTION 2

Note 5

Add in the Foot Note indicated :

10. 1953 Sau 113 (A I R V 40 C 59 Pr 16) (DB), Karsandas Ramji v. Karsanji Kalyanji. (A lease executed in the former Nawanagar State before the T. P Act was made applicable to the territory comprised in that State will not be governed by the provisions of T. P. Act but will be governed by the Common Law principles which were usually held applicable by all Courts in India.)

Note 6

Add in the Foot Notes indicated :

9. 1953 All 449 (A I R V 40 C 208 Pr 14) (DB), Lalta Prasad v. Brahmanand (Consideration of equity does not arise in case of such sale — Principle of caveat emptor applies to such sale. 1931 All 277 (AIR V 18) (FB), Nannu Mal v. Ram Chander, Relied on.)

10. 1955 Trav Co 130 (Prs 7, 9) [(S) A I R V 42 C 17] (DB), Bhageerathi Pillai v. Narayanan Prabhakaran. (Where at a time when the T. P. Act was not in force in Travancore the decree in a suit for recovery of property and mesne profits allowed the defendant to retain possession, of the property till she got the amount that was declared to be due her or to surrender possession of the property and claim the amount with interest and further she was also allowed to appropriate the profits from the property till she was paid her amount or till she surrendered possession of the property and claimed the amount with interest thereafter :

Held, that a mortgage was created on which the plaintiff could file a suit for redemption.)

Add before Pt. 1 after the words "act of parties" in the last line in para 1 :

[Pt. 1a] Section 2 (d) clearly excludes the application of the provisions of S. 105 to the relationship which has been created by a decree. In other words, when the Court is dealing with the relationship created by a decree passed by a Court, the terms of S. 105 as such would not be applicable. 1954 Bom 370 (A I R V 41 C 107 Pr 16) : I L R (1954) Bom 615 (DB), Ramjibhai Virpal v. Gordhandas Maganlal. (Provisions of S. 105 would be invoked, as matters of justice, equity and good conscience.)

SECTION 3

In Section 3,

(i) For the words 'a Province' the words 'a Part A State or a Part C State' were substituted by A. L. O. 1950.

(ii) For the words 'a Part A State or a Part C State' the words 'any State to which this Act extends' shall be substituted.

— Substituted by the Part B States (Laws) Act, III of 1951 (S. 3 and Sch.)

Note 2

Add in the Foot Notes indicated :

3. 1951 Bom 127 (A I R V 38 C 25 Prs 6, 10) : I L R (1951) Bom 692 (DB), Ramchandra Annappa v. Subraya Fimmaya.

6. 1952 Bom 454 (A I R V 39 Prs 7, 10) : I L R (1952) Bom 1090 (DB), Prahlad Dalsukhrai v. Maganlal Muljibhai Tewar. (Mortgagee's interest in mortgaged property.) ✣ ('50) 1950 Bur L R (HC) 80 (85, 87, 89), Ko U Mar v. Ma Saw Myaing.

7. 952 Bom 454 (AIR V 39 Prs 7, 10) : I L R (1952) Bom 1090 (DB), Prahlad Dalsukhrai v. Maganlal Muljibhai Tewar. (Even in case of usufructuary mortgage.)

28. 1952 Orissa 116 (A R V 39 C 30 P 5) (DB), Udayanarayan Ananga Bhima v. Badia Dasu. (Lease of such a right to collect rents (such as Must jir lease in Orissa) is a lease of immovable property.)

31. 1951 Madh B 92 (A I R V 38 C 37 P 15), Abbasali Shah v. Mohammad Shah.

Add after Pt 33 :

[Pt. 33a] (20) Mortgage decree is immovable property. 1949 Cal 549 (A I R V 36 C 147 Prs 14, 19) : I L R (1945) 2 Cal 526, Anandilal Poddar v. Keshao Deo Poddar. (This is the effect of amendment of S. 17 (1), Registration Act by addition of cl. [Pt. 10] In a recent Full Bench case, it was held by the Madras High Court, overruling 1933 Mad 795 [A I R V 20] (DB), Official Assignee Madras v. Sampath Naidu and approving 1915 Mad 972 [A I R V 2] (D B), Alamanayakunigari Nabi Sab v. Murukuti Papiah that S. 43 proceeds on the fundamental assumption that the erroneous or fraudulent representation induced the transferee to part with the consideration without knowing the true facts A transfer which was made on an erroneous representation may, in fact and in effect be a transfer of an expectancy, which is prohibited by the statute. That does not prevent the section from operating. Section 43 is not concerned with the ultimate effect of the transfer when it was made. It is concerned only with an erroneous representation by the transferor of his authority to transfer when in fact he had none. If it was the intention of the Legislature that in all cases of transfer whether the transfer was made disclosing the true facts or was made with an erroneous representation regarding the authority, no effect should be given to the transfer, where the transfer is prohibited under S 6 (a), it would have stated so and created an exception to S. 43. On the other hand, the illustration to the section indicates a contrary intention. Where, therefore the transferee from a reversioner was not aware of the truth at the time of the transfer that that which was being transferred was only a spes successionis. S. 43 would apply. 1953 Mad 637 [A I R V 40 C 250]: I L R (1953) Mad 427 (F B). Jumma Musjid Marcara v. Kodimani Andra Devaiah. (1915 Mad 972 [A I R V 2] (D B, Alamanayakunigari Nabi Sab v. Add After Pt. 6a :

[Pt. 6b] A sale of a share in zamindari land in a court sale implies the sale of everything that is attached or appertains to it. A grove standing on it is appurtenant to the zamindari and therefore passes to the purchaser a share in the grove also. 1946 52 I D 39415 (All) Raghubir Saran v. Toki Sing.) (1939) All 415 (A I R V 26) (FB), Umrao Singh v. Add after Pt. 10 at the end of the same para :

[Pt. 10a] Gift to a daughter at the time of her marriage or to a woman under coverture for her "choli bangadi" or "Haldi Kunkum" does not necessarily revert to the donor upon the donee becoming a widow. The idea conveyed by the use of these traditional expressions is that the woman going in the new family should have independent means for her personal

Add at the end of the Note :

[Pt. 5] It has now been authoritatively stated by their Lordships of the Supreme Court that the mere fact, that a gift of property is made for the support and maintenance of a female relation cannot be taken to be a prima facie indication of the intention of the donor that the donee was to enjoy the property only during her life time. The extent of interest which the donee is to take depends upon the intention of the donor as expressed by the language used and if the dispositive words employed in the document are clear and unambiguous and import absolute ownership the purpose of the grant would not by itself, restrict or cut down the interest. The desire to provide maintenance or residence for the donee would only show the motive which prompted the donor to make the gift but it cannot be read as a measure of the extent of the gift. 1951 S C 139 (Pr. 13) (A I R V 38 C 21): 1950 S C R 766 (S C), Ramgopal v. Nandlal. (1944 All 17 (A I R V 31), Lal Nandlal v. Add at the end of the Note :

[Pt. 23] The position has again been made clear in recent decisions of the Supreme Court where their Lordships have held that to convey an absolute estate to a Hindu female no express power of alienation need be given and it is enough if words are used of such amplitude as would convey full rights of ownership. 1951 S C 139 (Prs 8, 9) A I R V 38 C 21): 1950 S C R 766 (S C), Ram Gopal v. Nand Lal ✠ 1954 S C 355 (Pr 15) (AIR V 41 C 86 : 1955 S C R 51 (S C), Nathoolal v. Durga Prasad. (1951 S C 139 (A I R V 38 C 21): 1950 S C R 766 (S C), Ramgopal v. and validity of the terms of the proposed compromise. But once that state is passed and a decree follows, different considerations arise. Thus, where a compromise decree contains a term against alienating certain property and gives the other party right to its possession on such alienation, the decree is not a nullity in spite of the fact that the term is opposed to S. 10. It is merely contrary to law and binds the parties thereto, unless it is set aside by taking proper proceedings. 1953 Bom 412 (A I R V 40 C 128 P 12) : I L R (1953) Bom 948 (D B), Govind Waman v. Murlidhar Shrinivas. (1929 P C 289 [A I R V 16], C. [Pt. 5] In the undermentioned Calcutta case it was held that the section deals with cases where the benefit of any obligation relating to the property as a whole passes from one to several owners of the property. On partition the benefit of the obligation does not so pass. All the co-sharers of the reversion are before the partition entitled to the benefit of the obligation. The co-owner of the reversion who as a result of partition acquires exclusive title to a portion of the reversion remains subject to the liability both before and after partition and his liability is not dependent upon the election of the lessee. *('50) 86 Cal L Jour 198 (212, 213), Sm. Among other debts so paid, D paid off certain a ount to a Society E who held the property on mortgage. In 1944 when A was the president of the Society E, A got an application from C requesting E to accept the amounts due from him and convey the property to him A sale-deed was thus executed by E in favour of C on 1-10-44 of the same property. D being dispossessed in 1947 sued A B and C for possession, C contested the suit on the basis of his sale deed

It was held that neither N nor his wife C had any legal and conveyable title on 30-9-1947, when C purported to sell the equity of redemption to S The subsequent sale deed executed by Official Receiver in 1949 did not clothe S with title with effect from 1947 because under S. 43, Transfer of Property Act, it was the interest and title that C acquired in 1949 that the sale in favour of S by C in 1947 could operate and not before 7-3-1949 1954 Mad 861 (Pr 4, 7, 8, 12) (AIR V 41 C 288) : I L R (1954) Mad 791 (DB), Sankari Ammal v. Ramchandra Ayyar.

It cannot be contended in such a case that the contract of sale does not subsist when the decree for pre-emption has been passed. [Pt. 14a] A brought a suit to enforce the contract for sale in his favour, dated the 7th December 1943. The suit was brought on the 15th of August 1944, and when the suit was pending B brought his suit for redemption on the basis of purchase from the original mortgagor on the 30th of January 1945. A filed written statement on the 12th of May 1945. Clearly, therefore, A knew what B was claiming. In spite of that he did not choose to make B a party to his suit. He chose, however, to proceed against the vendor and obtained an 'ex parte' decree, by which a saledeed was executed in favour of A on the 19th of September 1946.

It was held that in such circumstances A could not now say that he was entitled to defeat the claim of the subsequent purchaser B on the doctrine of 'lis pendens' 1955 N U C (Pat) 1596 (A I R V 42), Jaleshwar Singh v Gorakh Singh.

[Pt 9a] In areas where Transfer of Property did not apply it has been held that before an oral sale can be allowed to be established in a Court of law, the Court must be convinced of one of two things, viz., that the entire consideration had been paid by the purchaser to the vendor or the possession of the property in question is made over from the one to the other. Other rules enacted in S. 54 are in the nature of technical provisions of law which should be extremely dangerous to apply where the Act is not in force. 1955 Raj 70 (Pr 5) (AIR V 42 C 23) : I L R (1954) 4 Raj 705 (DB), Sampat Raj v. Pokar.

In other words, it is not the garb with which the parties choose to clothe the transaction that should guide the Courts, but it is the spirit permeating the transaction that should be the determining factor of its real nature. 1954 All 195 (A I R V 41 C 108 P 10), Central Finance & Housing Co., Ltd. v. British Transport Co. (Held, that the transaction in question was in reality a transaction of sale and not a hire purchase agreement.)

10b. Sale or hire purchase agreement

[Pt. 1] An agreement styled as a hire purchase agreement was entered into between A and B. Under the agreement B agreed to take on hire a bus belonging to A and was liable to pay the hire of the bus by twelve monthly instalments starting from 1.7 1941 to 1.6-1942. The total amount of the instalments to be paid was Rs. 1320, which was equal to the value of the bus. After payment of the instalments the hirer was to become the absolute owner of the bus. If the hirer B made any default in payment of any of the instalments it was open to A to terminate the agreement and to take possession of the bus. On the other hand, B was also given the right to terminate the agreement only if the bus was surrendered in the same order and condition in which it was hired 'fair wear and tear excepted." In case B chose to terminate the agreement he was liable not only to deliver the bus but further to pay a sum of Rs. 1500 on acccunt of depreciation in the value of the bus. In addition to that he was to forfeit the amount of instalments already paid. It was held that the transaction was in reality a sale and not a hire purchase agreement. The so called right of termination given to the hirer was illusory and was deliberately inserted into the agreement for the purpose of giving it a deceptive appearance and concealing the fact that the transaction was an out and out sale. 1954 All 195 (A I R V 41 C 108 Pr 14), Central Finance & Housing Co., Ltd. v. British Transport Co.(Principles determining the nature of transaction laid down.)

Add after pt. 2 :

[Pt. 2a] A contrary view is, however, taken in the undermentioned case that under this clause, unless there is a contract to the contrary, giving delivery of possession to the buyer by the seller is an incident of a contract for sale and the right to recover possession springs out of the contract which is being specifically enforced and not as a result of the execution and completion of the conveyance. 1955 Cal 267 (268, 269) (Pr 4 6) (A I R V 42 C 71) (DB), Subodh Kumar v. Hiramoni Dasi. (When there is a decree directing the contract to be specifically performed it included a direction upon the vendor to give delivery of possession to the purchasers.)

Add after pt. 4 .

[Pt 4a] It has however been held in the undermentioned case that it is not necessary in a suit for specific performance either to separately claim possession or for the Court to pass a decree for possession. The decree for specific performance, which provides that the property shall be sold to the plaintiff by the defendants and the sale deed shall be executed within a certain time, failing which the Court will have the sale deed executed by a person nominated by it, implies that delivery of possession shall be given in accordance with the provisions of S. 55 (1) (f) of the Transfer of Property Act. Where therefore a decree for specific performance of a contract of sale is silent as to the relief of delivery of possession even though claimed in the suit, the executing Court is still competent to deliver possession. 1954 All 643 (Prs 2, 4) (A I R V 41 C 250) (DB), Balmukand v. Veerchand.

Add after Pt. 14 as a separate para :

[Pt 14a] Where the property sold is subject to a usufructuary mortgage, the existence of a statutory charge can arise only if there is a contract between the vendor and the vendee that the latter would pay the consideration into the hands of the vendor who would redeem the usufructuary mortgage on the property and deliver it free of encumbrance to the vendee. In such a case, it can be said that there is really a vendor's lien but such a statutory lien cannot be said to exist where the agreement is that the vendee should himself discharge the mortgage and recover possession of the property. In the latter case, the purchase price left with the vendee for payment of the usufructuary mortgage is not money due to the vendor under S. 55 (5) (b) and hence no statutory charge or vendor's lien on the property can arise in respect of that amount. The same result follows if the question is looked at by applying the principle laid down by the Privy Council in 31 All. 583; for, if the usufructuary mortgage becomes barred by time or the mortgagee gives up his right to a portion of the property the benefit thereof will go only to the vendee and not to the vendor. 1954 Mad 508 (A I R V 41 C 188 P 9) : I L R (1954) Mad 484, Vinaitheertha Thevar v. Viswanatha Ayyar.

[Pt. 1b] The right of marshalling can be taken away from the vendee if it is proved that the intention was to extinguish the entire mortgage and release the property from the mortgage, but if there was no such intention evidenced by any contract the right is not defeated or lost. 1952 All 163 (AIR V 39 C 57 P 13, 15) (DB), E. Tulsi Ram v. Maiku Lal. (Portion of consideration left with vendee not sufficient to discharge mortgage—Held, there was no contract to contrary.)

[Pt. 1c] Thus, where the three vendees under three different sale deeds promised to pay a certain sum of money to the mortgagee in part discharge of the mortgage debt and it was contemplated that the whole mortgage debt would be discharged if all the three vendees did pay as they promised to do, but no provision was made in the three sale deeds as to what was to happen in case the money was not paid promptly, it was held that since the parties did not contemplate the possibility of the property being brought to sale and a question arising as to the priority of the sale of the various items, it was not possible to spell out of the three sale deeds themselves any "contract to the contrary" within the meaning of this section. 1950 Mad 224 (A I R V 37 C 101 P 5) (DB), Pedapati Mangayya v. Garapali Achayamma.

Add after Pt. 2 :

[Pt. 3] An indemnity clause in the sale-deed to the effect that if any part of the property should go out of the vendee's possession due to the claim of any one, the vendee should be entitled to recover the loss from the vendor personally and from his other properties does not amount to a "contract to the contrary." 1952 All 163 (AIR V 39 C 57 P 13) (DB), Tulsi Ram v. Maiku Lal.

[Pt. 3] It has been held in the undermentioned case that it is possible to create a mortgage apart from what is provided for in the Transfer of Property Act. [Pt. 47a] A Full Bench of the Orissa High Court has held that where the document which effects or purports to effect the ostensible sale contains the third condition mentioned in the section, viz., "on such payment being made the buyer shall retransfer the property to the seller," it is to be presumed a mortgage and the party who asserts to the contrary must prove it. Ray C. J. was also of the opinion, though the observation is obiter, that if a document contained either the first or the second condition mentioned in the section, the transaction evidenced by the document must conclusively be held to be one of mortgage by conditional sale and not an out and out sale. Add after Pt. 47a :

[Pt. 47b] In Debi Singh v. Jagdish Saran Singh the question came up for decision before a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court. It was held by the majority (Agarwala and Chandiramani JJ.) that the effect of the addition of the proviso was to lay down a conclusive statutory test and that if a deed effecting or purporting to effect a sale contained any one of the three conditions mentioned in the clause it is in every case a mortgage by conditional sale irrespective of the intention of the parties Beg J.; however, took a contrary view and held that the effect of the proviso was merely to limit the Court's power to enquire into the question whether the transaction is a mortgage only to cases where the condition is embodied in one document and to bar it in cases of multiple documents. 1952 All 716 (AIR V 39 P 156) : ILR (1952) 2 All 200 (FB), Debi Singh v. Jagdish Saran Singh.

[Pt. 47bb] The Supreme Court has not held that persons who, after the amendment, choose not to use two documents do not intend the transaction to be a sale unless they displace that presumption by clear and express words; and if the conditions of S. 58 (c) are satisfied then the deed should be construed as a mortgage. In view of these observations the majority view in the Allahabad decision must be held to be overruled. 1954 S C 345 (Pr 8) (AIR V 41 C 83) : 1955 S C R 174 (SC), Chunchun Jha v. Ebadat Ali.

[Pt. 2] The difference between chitham and a simple mortgage is that in chitham on failure to pay the mortgage amount on due date, the mortgagee becomes entitled to recover possession and to enjoy the usufruct, either in lieu of interest or otherwise as might have been agreed between the parties, till the mortgagor chooses to redeem. 1952 Kutch 65 (AIR V 39 P 4), Bhagwanji Jetha v Thacker Parshottam Lalji.

[Pt. 3] A chitham being in its nature an anomalous mortgage, the question whether it contains a personal liability to pay has to be determined with reference to the terms of the deed itself. 1952 Kutch 65 (A I R V 39 P 6), Bhagwanji Jetha v. Thacker Parshottam Lalji.

[Pt. 4] A provision in a Chitham mortgage that in case of default to pay within the stipulated time the mortgagee is entitled to remain in possession as a vatantar mortgagee till redemption by the mortgagor negatives, by implication, a personal liability. It cannot be construed to give an option to the mortgagee either to take vatantar or to sue for recovery of mortgage-money. 1952 Kutch 65 (A IR V 39 P 7), Bhagwanji Jetha v. Thacker Parshottam Lalji.

Note 37c

Add after Note 37b :

37c. Vatantar Mortgage.

[Pt. 1] This kind of mortgage is prevalent in Kutch. Section 645 of the Digest of Local Customs which is regarded as authoritative and binding in Kutch says that in a vatantar transaction, a person lends money on (security) of immovable property; the property remains in possession of the lender, the lender uses the property or enjoys its rent or profit in lieu of interest; the property is returned to the borrower on payment of the principal amount borrowed. These characteristics of a vatantar prima facie show that it is a mortgage transaction. Vatantar is thus a transfer of interest, as distinguished from ownership, in specific immovable property as security for loan and is not a transaction called mortgage by conditional sale as property is not ostensibly sold. Further, a vatantar has all the principal characteristics of a usufructuary mortgage and thus amounts to a usufructuary mortgage. 1953 Kutch 4 (A I R V 40 C 3 P 4 to 7), Nandvana Jata Shankar v. Jiva Vasan; 1953 Kutch 8 (A I R V 40 C 5 P 7), Jeevandas Iqji v. Jadeja Karubha Dujajee.

[Pt. 2] Though in some vatantar transactions time limit called bandhi is provided, it is not universal and cannot, therefore, be regarded as characteristic of the transaction. It is merely a covenant entered into by the parties to these particular transactions and cannot convert it into an anomalous mortgage. 1953 Kutch 4 (AIR V 40 C 3 P 8), Nandavana Jata Shankar v. Jiva Vasan.

The Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act which is a special statute intended to give relief only to agriculturists trenches upon the general law in so far as it expressly provides that a debt owing to an agriculturist shall be scaled down under the Act. Thus, in case of a mortgage-debt when the loan has been advanced to more than one person, if one of the debtors happens to be an agriculturist while others are not, the agriculturist debtor is entitled to have his debts scaled down under the provisions of that Act in spite of the provision of the general law which prevents a mortgagor from denying the liability of the interest which he owns in the mortgaged property to satisfy the entire mortgage-debt. There is, therefore, nothing wrong in law in scaling down a mortgage decree in favour of one of the judgment-debtors, while as regards others the decree is kept intact. 1951 S C 189 (A I R V 38 C 30 P 10) : 1951 S C R 292 (S C), Ramaswami Aiyengar v. Kailasa Thevar.

Add after Pt. 3a :

[Pt. 3b] The stipulation that the mortgagor shall pay the cost of "shakasht" (breakage) and 'rekhat' (destruction) cannot be taken to mean that the mortgagor thereby binds himself to pay the expenses which the mortgagee may incur in breaking or demolishing the mortgaged property and then in rebuilding the same. Reasonably interpreted, the stipulation only means that the mortgagor takes upon himself to pay the costs of repairs or rebuilding in case of breakage or destruction, which are due to natural deterioration or by some other act of nature beyond the control of the mortgagee and not undertaken by him at his own initiative and out of his own sweet will. 1955 Pepsu 87 (Pr 4) ((S)AIR V 42 C 20) (DB), Charan Dass v. Shadiram.

[Pt. 1b] Even in the case of natural decay or destruction of the mortgaged property by some unforeseen calamity, the expenditure on its repairs or rebuilding should be reasonable. What constitutes a proper and necessary expenditure is a question of fact depending upon the circumstances of each case. Held, that the huge expenditure on the new construction could not be regarded reasonable.)

Add after Pt 8 :

[Pt. 8a] The Supreme Court has however recently held, in Kamakshaya Narayan Singh v. Chohan Ram, that even in such cases the question has to be decided not on a distinction between an English mortgage and a simple mortgage or on considerations germane to S. 66 but on general principles with reference to the authority of the mortgagor as bailiff or agent of the mortgagee to deal with the property in the usual course of management. 1952 S C 401 (A I R V 39 P 12) : 1953 S C R 108 : 31 Pat 1020 (S C), Kamakshaya Narayan Singh v. Chohan Ram (S. 66 has no applicability to leases of mortgaged property.)

Note 4

Add after Pt. 5 :

[Pt. 5a] It is for the lessee, if he wants to resist the claim of the mortgagee, to establish that the lease in his favour was granted on the usual terms in the ordinary course of management. If he fails to raise that plea and establish it he can have no defence to an action by the mortgagee for a declaration that the lease is not binding on him. 1952 S C 401 (A I R V 39 P 13) : 1953 S C R 108 : 31 Pat 1020 (S C), Kamakshaya Narayan Singh v. Chohan Ram. (Case of grant of permanent lease.)

Add after Pt 6 :

[Pt. 6a] The Supreme Court has, however, recently held that considerations germane to S. 66 have nothing to do with the question of the binding nature of a lease granted by the mortgagor and that the only consideration relevant in such cases would be whether, the mortgagor in possession having the authority to deal with the property in the usual course of management, the lease granted by him can rightly be deemed operative against the mortgagee. 1952 S C 401 (AIR V 39 P 10, 11) : 1953 S C R 108 : 31 Pat 1920 (S C), Kamakshaya Narayan Singh v. Chohan Ram. (Permanent lease of land—Lessee not pleading that it was a dealing in the usual course of management by mortgagor—In absence of plea mortgagee held not bound.)

Act, the lessees would be tenants from year to year for they were inducted into possession by the then landholder, as his tenants and they continued to be in possession on the date when the Third Amendment Act (18 of 1936) came into force.)

Add at the end of the Note :

[Pt. 7] Though the lease may not be binding on the mortgagee, as between the lessor and the lessee, the lessee is not entitled to say that the lessor had no power to grant the lease on the ground that he had not obtained the consent of the mortgagee in granting the lease as provided in the mortgage. 1955 N U C (All) 1691 (A I R V 42), Devi Chand v. *L. Note 3

Add after Pt. 1 :

[Pt. 1a] The mortgagor in possession is not liable for what in terms of the English Law of Real Property is known as permissive waste, that is for omission to repair or to prevent natural deterioration. He is, however, liable for destructive waste, that is, acts which are destructive or permanently injurious to the mortgaged property if the security was insufficient or would be rendered insufficient by such acts. 1952 S C 401 (A I R V 39 P 10) : 1953 S C R 108 : 31 Pat 1020 (S C), Kamakshaya Narayan Singh v. Chohan Ram. (This section, therefore, has no application to the grant of a lease by the mortgagor in possession.)

[Pt. 10a] It has been held in the under-mentioned case that where the mortgagor fails to deliver possession and the mortgage deed also specifically provides a personal covenant to pay, the mortgagee may either exercise his option under S. 68 (1) (d) or may act under the terms of the personal covenant itself. If the option is exercised by him under S. 68 (1) (d), the mortgage amount becomes due and the mortgagor will have to submit to a decree for the payment of the said amount. If the option under S. 68 (1) is not exercised by the mortgagee, the amount cannot be said to be due and the mortgagor will have to wait for the expiration of the stipulated period before he can redeem the property. 1954 Bom 407 (Pr 5) (A I R V 41 C 111) : I L R (1954) Bom 717 (DB), Sidramaya v. Danava. (1947 Bom 152 (A I R V 34 C 47), Dnyanoba Gangaram v. Note 3

Add after Pt. 7 :

[Pt. 8] There must be some substantive legislation which takes away the right of sale given to the mortgagee by the mortgage deed. Once a suit is filed by a mortgagor who is an agriculturist under S. 15D of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, the mortgagee cannot exercise his power of sale given under the mortgage deed so long as the suit remains pending. But once the decree is passed declaring an amount and the mortgagor has not exercised his option of redemption and the mortgagee has not exercised his option to ask for decree for sale, then the mortgagee cannot be prevented from exercising his right of sale under the mortgage deed. 1950 Bom 49 (AIR V 37 C 15 P 5) (DB), Govindram Bros. Ltd. v. Official Assignee Bombay.

[Pt. 9] Under a mortgage deed it was provided that the mortgagees shall have the power to realise the amounts due under the mortgage by selling the property which was situated within the limits of the city of Madras in public auction or by private treaty under the provisions of S. 69 of the Transfer of Property Act. Default having occurred in the payment of the mortgage amount, the mortgagees sought to bring the property to sale in pursuance of the power granted as aforesaid. The mortgagor applied for the issue of a writ of mandamus to the mortgagees to stop the sale on the ground that while simple mortgagees of properties situated outside the City of Madras could enforce the mortgage only by instituting a suit thereon, the mortgagees of properties in the City of Madras were empowered by S. 69 of the Transfer of Property Act to realise the amounts due to them without the intervention of Court and that was a discrimination against mortgagors within the City of Madras and therefore repugnant to Art. 14 of the Constitution. It was held that the writ was not taken out against the State in which alone Art. 14 casts a duty and as what the mortgagees, who were citizens of the Union of India like the mortgagors, proposed to do was to enforce the contract entered into by them with the mortgagors, Art. 14 could obviously have no application. As the mortgagees were seeking merely to enforce private rights a writ of mandamus would not lie. 1955 N U C (Mad) 1828 (A I R V 42). T. S. Ramaswamy Iyer v. Gangadhar Bhatt.

[Pt. 11] The power of the mortgagee to sell under S. 69, does not in any way interfere with the freedom of the mortgagor to acquire property or dispose of property or hold property. On the other hand, this is a case of the mortgagor under the freedom guaranteed under Art. 14 of the Constitution holding property and subject to a freely negotiated contract by him, acquiring funds thereon providing for the disposal of the pr perty in the event of his not being able to discharge the mortgage in the manner agreed to by him Therefore, S. 69, does not offend Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution. *1955 Mad 135 (Pr 25) ((S) AIR V 42 C 33). [Pt. 1a] Thus, it has been held that a mortgagee's sale in exercise of the power reserved in that behalf in the mortgage is not liable to be impeached on account of want of publicity or want of notice as required by law. 1955 Mad 331 (Pr 12) ((S) A I R V 42 C 90) (DB), Ranganathan v. Govt. of Madras.

Add at the end as a separate para :

[Pt. 4] A sale by a mortgagee or receiver for debenture holders effected in pursuance of the power vested in him in that behalf by the mortgage deed or the debenture trust deed as the case may be without the sanction of the Court cannot be avoided as falling under either S. 171 or 232 of the Companies Act. A secured creditor realising his security without seeking the assistance of the Court is, thus, outside the winding up and no leave of Court is needed when a receiver appointed by a mortgagee exercises his power of sale under S. 69 (3), T. P. Act. If there is no allegation of want of 'bona fides' or recklessness or fraud against the receiver in exercising such a power, the sale held by the receiver is valid and effectual to convey title to the purchaser and such a sale cannot be avoided on the ground either of want of due notice given by the receiver before effecting the sale or on the ground of undervalue. 1955 Mad 331 (Pr 17, 18) ((S) AIR V 42 C 90)(DB), Ranganathan v. Govt. of Madras.

Add at the end of third paragraph after the words "the removal of the receiver" :

[Pt. 2] The provisions of S. 69-A (2) would cover a case in which it is alleged by the mortgagor that there is no debt outstanding and therefore there should be no receiver. Add after Pt. 3 :

[Pt. 3a] The doctrine, however, cannot be applied to cases where altogether different and distinct items are allotted. Thus where, notwithstanding the acquisition by the Municipality of a portion of the property and its substitution by a distinct plot as a compensation to the owner, a decree is passed purporting to create a charge over the entire property making no mention of the substituted property and the entire property is proclaimed for sale and purchased in execution by the decree-holder, the sale certificate making no reference to the substituted property, neither S. 73, in terms nor the principle of substituted security is applicable and the decree-holder auction-purchaser is not entitled to claim any title to the substituted property. 1952 Mad 263 (AIR V 39 C 105 (9) P 5), Nallamuthu Pillai v. Aravamudhu Iyengar.

Add after Pt. 9 :

[Pt. 9a] Thus if before the final decree is passed mortgaged property is substituted by another security in the form of compensation money it is a case of one mortgaged property being substituted by another security and a final decree directing payment out of this fund may be justified and on an application made on behalf of the plaintiff mortgagee the original Court can award final decree against the substituted security. But where final decree is already passed as against the original property it has been held that the directions pertaining to the mortgaged property can appropriately be read as those pertaining to the substituted security by reason of S. 73 (2), and the Court executing the decree can secure realization and application of the fund standing as substituted security. The doctrine of substituted security can be applied in execution. 1954 Madh B 181 (Prs 19, 20) (A I R V 41 C 82) (FB). Nabbobai v. Hasan Gani.

[Pt. 1] There is no difference in legal character between a lease and sub-lease. It is true that in the case of a lease, the proprietor is the transferor, and in the case of a sub-lease the lessee is the transferor. But this does not affect the legal character of the transaction. A lease is the transfer of a right to enjoy immovable property made for a certain time and where the agreement (whether it is called a lease or a sub-lease) vests in the grantee a right of possession for a certain time, it operates as a conveyance and is a lease in the eye of law. 1954 Pat 340 (342) (Pr 5) (AIR V 41 C 119) : ILR 33 Pat 198 (DB), Mineral Development, Ltd. v. Union of India.

[Pt. 1b] The contract may be express or may be implied from the acts and conduct of the parties which indicate that the landlord intended to divest himself of the possession of the premises and that the tenant intended to assume possession thereof. One of the most important circumstances from which this inference may be drawn is the payment of rent, for although rent is not an essential, it is a normal incident of tenancy, and the fact that a person in possession of the premises paid rent to the owner thereof indicates to an extent at least that the relationship of landlord and tenant exists between the parties. On the other hand the fact that no rent was paid would lead one to a contrary conclusion and negative the existence of such relationship. 1955 Punj 37 (39) (A I R V 42 C 13 P 10) (DB), Ammar Ahmad Khan v. Union of India 1955 Punj 34 (36) ((S) A I R V 42

[Pt. 4a] So also a unilateral unregistered agreement by a person to occupy a house and pay a certain monthly rent, is nothing more than a karar or agreement undertaking to pay rent for use and occupation and not a lease. [Pt. 14a] The reason for this distinction between a lease and a licence is apparent. In the case of a licence except in the two cases mentioned in S. 60 (a) and (b) of the Easements Act it is revokable at the will of the owner. For that reason, unlike in the case of lease, the Legislature did not provide for forfeiture in the case of a licence. 1953 Mad 456 (A I R V 40 C 173 P 4), Punnamma R. v. Lakkaraju Venkata.

[Pt. 6] In case of a Kanom tenancy under which the tenant is entitled not only to hold it for the period of twelve years generally but also to hold it so long as the Kanom amount remains unpaid it is not true to say that his title becomes extinguished by the expiry of the term. Nor can it be said that he is a person who holds over without the consent of the landlord for he is there by reason of the charge without payment of which he is not liable to be turned out. He is entitled to hold it whether or not it pleases the landlord. Such tenant cannot therefore be treated on the same footing as a tenant at sufferance. ('49) 1949 Trav-Co L R 50 (54) (DB), Parameswaran Namboodripad v. Variathu.

Add after Pt. 12 at the end of the para :

[Pt. 12a] It was held in the undermentioned case that a presumption of lost grant can reasonably be made where there has been non-realisation of rent for several years and where the origin of the tenancy is unknown. When, therefore, no custom is pleaded and there is no Act of the Legislature conferring permanent rights on the persons occupying the land and the lease settlement on which they rely is prohibited by the statute, it is not open to the Court to hold that they had acquired right of tenancy by prescription. 1952 Pat 43 (A I R V 39 C 15 P 5), Sahabu Mahton v. Hari Ram Mohto. (('8) I L R 9 Bom 198, Radhabai v. Anantrav Bhagvant, Doubted.)

Add after Pt. 3 :

[Pt. 3a] The Court must look to the original intention of the parties which can be gathered from the deed itself and not to the subsequent conduct of the lessee. 1951 All 396 (A I R V 38 C 70 P 6) (D B), Manzoor Ali Usmani v. Mt Lal Devi. (If after taking a lease for a showroom the lessee, (a manufacturing concern) began to carry on any manufacturing operation upon the premises the lease is not converted into one for manufacturing purposes. The very fact that the lease was only for a period of one year indicates that the original intention was not to let out the premises for manufacturing purposes.)

[Pt. 3b] A lease for manufacturing purpose must be a lease which at its inception is for that purpose by agreement of the parties and both parties must know that the lease is for manufacturing purpose at the time of the grant. If that is not so the nature of the subsequent user by the tenant without agreement of the landlord will not convert it nto one for manufacturing purpose. 1952 Cal 320 (A I R V 39 C 83 P 16), Sati Prasanna v. Md. Fazal.

[Pt. 3c] The word 'manufacturing' in this section should be given its commonly understood meaning which is neither the etymological meaning nor the technical meaning as applied to mechanical industry or commerce. The popular concept is that there must be production of a new or a different article or the process must be such as converts one kind of article into another. In this sense printing simpliciter is not necessarily a manufacture. 1952 Cal 320 (A I R V 39 C 83 P 13), Sati Paasanna Mukherjee v. Md. Fazal.

[Pt 3d] A lease for mixed or multiple purpose like dwelling purpose, for setting up a printing press and for ordinary business purposes is not a lease for 'manufacturing purpose' within the meaning of this section but is within the meaning of the words 'any other purpose' in the section. 1952 Cal 320 (A I R V 39 C 83 P 10), Sati Prasanna Mukherjee v Md Fazal. ✱ *1955 Cal 169 (172) (Pr 19) (A I R V 42 C 43), L. Md. Fazel; A F. O. D. No 52 of 1950, D/- 23.11-1950 (Cal.) Mohd. Fazal v. Sati Prasanna. Foll.)

[Pt. 3e] The use of the word "manufacture" to describe the process of preparation of sweets though not unknown is, generally speaking, not very appropriate and as a general rule it cannot be held that preparation of sweetmeats would answer the test of "manufacture' for purposes of the section. 1954 Cal 224 (A I R V 40 C 84 P 6) Brohmananda Das v. Nagendra Chandra Sarkar. (Held on facts that lease in question was at least as much for sale of sweets as for preparing the same in the disputed premises That being so, it was not solely for manufacturing purposes but was as much for other purposes as well. It was therefore, a lease for "any other purpose.)"

Add at the end of the Note as a separate para:

[Pt. 5] Where the plaint in an ejectment suit very distinctly averred that the tenancy was a monthly one according to the contract between the parties and the assertion in the plaint was not specifically denied in the written statement; and the only plea which the defendants set up was that the lease granted to the defendant being a manufacturing lease, the fifteen days' notice was invalid, it was held that in the absence of any specific denial, it must be assumed, that there was a contract according to which, in spite of the nature of the tenancy, the parties agreed that the tenancy should be a monthly tenancy for which a monthly rent was payable, and therefore on the terms of S. 106 itself the tenancy was terminable by fifteen days' notice to quit expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy. 1955 Assam 102 (104) (Pr 5) (A I R V 42 C 21) (D B), Jewan Singh v. Mandalal Agarwalla.

Add after the end of Pt. 2a:

[Pt. 2b] It is submitted with respect that the decision in so far as it holds the lease to be valid for the first year is not correct. In Ram Kumar v Jagdish Chandra, the Supreme Court had an occasion to deal with this very question. In that case the defendant had executed a registered kabuliat in favour of the plaintiff by which he took a settlement of land for building purposes at an annual rent for a period of ten years. The defendant paid the annual rent for the first two years only. The kabuliat not being an operative document under S. 107, the question was whether the tenancy created by implication of law was a month to month tenancy. It was held that the tenancy created by implication of law must be presumed to be a monthly tenancy under this section. In repelling the contention that a lease for one year certain might fairly be presumed from the payment of annual rent, Justice B. K. Mukherjea who delivered the judgment of the Court observed as follows.—

"But one serious objection to this view seems to be that this would amount to making a new contract for the parties. The parties here certainly did not intend to create a lease for one year. The lease was intended to be for a period exceeding one year, but as the intention was not expressed in the proper legal form it could not be given effect to. It is one thing to say that in the absence of a valid agreement, the rights of the parties would be regulated by law in the same manner as if no agreement existed at all; it is quite another thing to substitute a new agreemen for the parties which is palpably contradicted by the admitted facts of the case."

[Pt 4] Clause 23 of the C. The tenancy is, therefore between the Government servant or the displaced person and the landlord, and will be governed by T.P. Act in all matters except those in respect of which provisions have been made in the Order. Hence, where a Government servant to whom a house had been allotted under Cl. 23 of the Order subsequently retires from Government service, there is no automatic termination of the tenancy by reason of such retirement under the Order and the Rent Controller has no power to issue notice calling upon such retired servant to vacate the house. *1953 Nag 31 (AIR V 40 C 17 P 2, 5, 6) : ILR 1952) Nag 767 (DB), Sarvate, R. Note 1a

Add after Note 1 :

1a. This section and S. 106—

[Pt. 1] Section 107 deals with the creation of a tenancy from year to year by act of parties Section 106 provides for the lease where the contract between the parties is silent as to its duration and enacts that the lease shall be deemed to be a lease from year to year, though not registered The lease by operation of law is a very different thing from the creation of a lease from year to year by act of parties. The two sections deal with entirely different matters and there is no conflict or contradiction between the two. 1950 Cal 23 (A I R V 37 C 6 P 23) : I L R (1950) 2 Cal 443 Ram Pratap v. National Petroleum Co Ltd.

Add after Pt. 2 :

[Pt. 2a] A lease which under the law is "deemed" to be a lease from year to year is nonetheless 'a lease from year to year' and must satisfy the statutory requirement of registration subject of course to the provision of S. 53A 1952 Cal 320 (A I R V 39 C 83 P 15), Sati Prasanna Mukherjee v. Md. Fazal.

Add after Pt. 3 :

[Pt. 4] In the undermentioned case, it was held that when a person held over, after an unregistered lease of a shop for manufacturing purpose for one year, which fixed only monthly rent the holding over could not be from year to year as that would amount to negativing the provisions of S. 107 and that the tenancy must be held to be from month to month, so far as the period of holding over was concerned. 1952 All 634 (A I R V 39 C 123 P 4, 5), Kishan Lal v Lal Ram Chander.

It is, however, submitted that the lease by holding over under S 116, though it may be from year to year does not require any registration. There seems no question of negativing the provisions of S 107 as the section does not apply to cases by holding over But the actual decision may perhaps be justified on the ground that the provision for monthly rent is an "agreement to contrary" within the meaning of S. 116.

Add after Pt. 3 :

[Pt. 3a] Where in a suit for ejectment the plea of the tenant attracts the first paragraph of S. 107, T. [Pt. 8b] Similarly where the lessor did not execute any document and it was the lessee alone who executed a kabuliyat and the lessee was in possession of the property after the execution of the kabuliyat it was held that it may be presumed under S. 114 of the Evidence Act that there must have been an oral agreement between the lessor and lessee agreeing to the terms on which the lessee was being put in possession of the property and there was, therefore, an oral agreement accompanied by delivery of

Add after Pt. 6 as separate para :

[Pt. 6a] The requirement of S. 107 of joint execution by the lessor and the lessee applies only to a case where a lease of immovable property is made by a registered instrument. Hence, a kabuliat executed by a lessee, if unregistered, does not come within the mischief of S. 107. 1954 Cal 207 (A I R V 41 C 75 P 4) (DB), Ram Abatar Mahato v. Sri Shanta Bala Dasi.

Add as a separate para after Pt. 8 :

[Pt. 9] S. 108(1) lays down the liability of the lessee to pay at the proper time and place the rent to the lessor or his agent. The emphasis in cl. (1) is on payment or tender at the proper time or place. The clause has nothing to do with the fixation of rent, and therefore the provisions of the Rajasthan Premises (Control of Rent and Eviction) Act, 1950, which give power to the Courts to scale down the agreed rent, cannot be said to be repugnant to cl. (1), but they are only supplementary to it. It provides that the agreement between the parties may be varied on certain grounds, and the procedure for this variation is provided in the Act. It cannot be said that Ss. 6 and 8 of the Act create a repugnancy with S. 105 or 108 (1), Transfer of Property Act, in view of the provisions of S. 37, Contract Act, which clearly envisages interference with agreement by validly made law. 1954 Raj 252 (Pr 12) (AIR V 41 C 79) (DB), Milapchand v. Dwarkadas.

Add after Pt. 14 as separate para :

[Pt. 15] The defendant was an under-raiyat of D who in his turn was the under-raiyat of B who was the raiyat. B subsequently granted to the plaintiff an ijara lease by virtue of which the plaintiff became an under-raiyat of the first degree and D became an under-raiyat of the second degree. Before the expiration of plaintiff's ijara lease he acquired the interest of D by purchase in execution of his rent decree and kept it quite distinct from his own ijara interest. The plaintiff filed a suit for rent against the defendant for a period subsequent to the date of the expiry of his ijara. It was held that there was no merger of the under-raiyati interest of D which the plaintiff had acquired by purchase with his own ijara interest, so as to disentitle him from asserting the under-raiyati interest or from claiming rent from the defendant on the strength of that interest even after the expiry of the ijara lease and that neither the theory of intention nor the doctrine of benefit could be invoked to infer merger in the present case. 1954 Cal 219 (A I R V 41 C 81 P 2), Raju Singh v. Nagendra Nath.

Add after Pt. 4a and before the beginning of para 2 :

[Pt. 4b] One of two joint lessees cannot, in the absence of express words or authority, surrender the rights held jointly. Add after Pt. 13 :

[Pt. 14] For distinction between assignment and surrender of tenancy see the undermentioned case. 1952 S C 156 (A I R V 39 P 9) : 1952 S C R 418 : 1952 Cri L Jour 836 (SC), W. H. King v. Republic of India. (In the case of an assignment, the assignor continues to be liable to the landlord for the performance of his obligations under the tenancy and this liability is contractual while the assignee becomes liable by reason of privity of estate. The consent of the landlord to an assignment is not necessary, in the absence of a contract or local usage to the contrary. But in the case of relinquishment, it cannot be a unilateral transaction ; it can only be in favour of the lessor by mutual agreement between them. The relinquishment of possession must be to the lessor or one who holds by his interest. In fact, a surrender or relinquishment terminates the lessee's rights and lets in the lessor)

Add after Pt. 2 in same para :

[Pt. 2a] It does not depend on the intention of the parties like express surrender. Add after Pt. 2a in the beginning of para 2, under sub-heading " By acceptance of new lease" :

[Pt. 2b] The principle underlying cl. Add after Pt. 20 as separate para :

Tenant taking possessory mortgage of lease hold.

[Pt. 20a] The acceptance by the lessee, who takes possessory mortgage of his leasehold from the lessor, of the obligation to surrender the property on redemption by payment of the price of redemption, namely, all the mortgage money and value of improvements, necessarily implies the non-existence of his rights to possession of the property as lessee. There is, therefore, an implied surrender of the lease, with the execution and acceptance of the possessory mortgage. 1953 Trav-Co 584 (A I R V 40 C 231 P 5, 6) : I L R (1953) Trav-Co 568, Velu v. Lkshmi.

Add after Pt. 21 in separate para :

Requisition by Government from tenant holding over.

[Pt. 22] Where after the determination of the defendant's tenancy by notice, the defendant holds over and during the period of the holding over the Government requisitions the premises, it amounts to the yielding over possession to the landlord, when the premises are taken over by the Government from the defendant and the defendant thereafter pays rent to the Government, or in the alternative it amounts to implied surrender or surrender by operation of law of the tenancy. 1952 Cal 455 (AIR V 39 P 17, 18, 19, 26), Sailabala Dassee v. *Tappassier, H. Add after Pt 22 as a separate para :

Requisition under Rule 75 (a), Defence of Inaia Rules, 1939

[Pt. 23] Where the Government takes possession of the property under a requisition order under R. 75 (a), Defence of India Rules, 1939, there is no mutuality because it takes possession both from landlord and from the tenant. It cannot, therefore, operate as surrender so as to terminate the tenancy. 1950 Bom 89 (A I R V 37 C 26 P C 9, 10), Tarabai Jivanlal v. Padamchand.

Add after Pt. 1a :

[Pt. 1b] The actual date of the forfeiture is the date of the notice of the forfeiture. Where a forfeiture has been incurred for breach of any condition the lessor must do some act evidencing his intention to avail of the forfeiture and that act under the Transfer of Property Act is to give notice to determine the lease and the lease will be avoided from that time only. 1952 Cal 47 (AIR V 39 C 15 P 23), Talbot & Co. v. Haricharan Halwasiya.

Add after Pt. 2 in same para :

Add after Pt. 2a as separate para :

[Pt. 2b] Leases executed in territories to which the Act did not apply will be governed by the Common Law principles which were usually held applicable by all Courts in India. In such a case it is not necessary for the landlord to do any overt act showing an intention to determine the lease nor is any notice to determine the lease necessary. The mere institution of a suit for ejectment is a sufficient indication of landlord's intention to determine the lease and no separate notice is necessary to determine it. 1953 Sau 113 (AIR V 40 C 59 P 16) (DB), Karsandas Ramji v. Karsanji Kalyanji. (Lease executed in former State of Nawanagar, before T. Distinction between cls. (b) and (g).

[Pt. 17] In forfeiture under cl. (g) "the term created by the instrument" is defeated on the happening of a particular event or the doing of a particular act. In clause (b), on the other hand, the term does not come to an end on the doing of an act or the happening of an event. It applies where the time is limited conditionally on the happening of some event and that event happens. In cl. (b) the term is fixed conditionally and depends upon the happening of a future event. In cl. (g) the term is brought to an end by a defeasance clause. This is the difference between cls. (b) and (g). 1952 Cal 207 (AIR V 39 C 75 (6) P 13, 16, 20, 30, 31), Srinath Zamindary, In re. (Lease to company for 99 years—Lease to cease to be operative on company's liquidation—Company going into voluntary liquidation—Held, cl. (g) and not cl. (b) applied and a valid notice to determine lease was essential.)

[Pt. 2a] But where the contractual relation created is in the nature of a perpetual tenure rather than the creation of relationship of 'landlord' and 'tenant' and the position is really that of a 'grantor' and 'grantee' the law of forfeiture on non-payment of rent is not applicable in the absence of proof of a definite contract to that effect. 1952 Orissa 99 (A I R V 39 C 24 P 24) : I L R (1949) 1 Cut 139 (D B), Tirtha Naik v. Lal Sadanand Singh.

[Pt. 5a] It is the proviso for re-entry which is required in English law to be express, because the law leans against forfeiture and gives effect to it only when the stipulation is direct and clear. Where the plaintiff, an heir of the lessor, brought a suit for arrears of rent and ejectment alleging that "in spite of demands the defendant did not pay the rent and now he is denying the plaintiff's title," it was held that there was no plea of forfeiture by disclaimer, that the suit was for ejectment for non-payment of rent and that since there was no express provision for re-entry on non-payment of rent, the suit was not maintainable. This suit was ultimately decreed but during this suit there was a fresh disclaimer of plaintiff's title and the plaintiff without serving any fresh notice to quit brought a suit for possession and injunction in respect of the demised premises. It was held that the suit was not maintainable on the basis of disclaimer of plaintiff's title in the previous suit as the plaintiff had failed to give fresh notice as required by S. 111 (g). The rights and obligations under those leases have to be determined according to the rules of law prevailing at the time and the only rule applicable is that a tenant cannot by his unilateral act and by his own wrong determine the lease unless the lessor gives an indication by some unequivocal expression of intention on his part of taking advantage of the breach. 1953 S C 228 (AIR V 40 C 55 P 20): 1953 S C R 1009 (S C), Namdeo Lokman Ladhi v. *Narmadabai. But if the tenant recognises the severance of the reversion or acknowledges the title of the owner of a severed part of the reversion the notice to quit severed part would be good and binding on the tenant. [Pt. 10a] When the lessor sues for ejectment of a tenant he must state the facts constituting the cause of action in detail and state when it arose. Add after Pt. 11 as a separate para :

Effects of breach of condition and notice to quit :—

[Pt. 11a] The effects of a breach of condition and of a notice to quit are widely different. On the expiration of the notice to quit the lease determines automatically. Breach of condition makes the lease voidable at the option of the lessor. If the lessor does not avoid the lease, the lease continues to exist. Further there is a fundamental difference between a waiver of a forfeiture which can be done at the election of the landlord alone and waiver of notice to quit which proceeds on the basis of a new agreement between the landlord and tenant. When a valid notice to quit has been given a new tenancy can be created only by an express or implied agreement. ('50) 86 Cal L Jour 198 (209), Sm. Durgarani Devi v. Mohiuddin.

Act, has no application to the proceeding for eviction under the Bihar Buildings (Lease, Rent and Eviction) Control Act : 1949 Mad 780, (A I R V 36 C 351), Krishnamurthy v. Parthasarathy, Rel. on.)

Add after Pt. 2 as separate paras :

[Pt. 3] Madhya Bharat Sthan Niyantran Vidhan (15 of 1950), S. 4 — Before the landlord can seek protection of the provisions of S. 4 of the Sthan Niyantran Vidhan he must prove that he had determined the tenancy by a valid notice to quit. It is true that by merely proving a valid notice to quit, a landlord cannot get a decree for ejectment and possession. He has to prove one of the grounds mentioned in S. 4 of the Sthan Niyantran Vidhan. However where the tenancy is not a statutory one but by contract the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act are neither repealed nor abrogated by the Sthan Niyantran Vidhan. Consequently before a landlord can sue for eviction of a tenant he must have terminated the tenancy i. e., either by effluxion of time or by determination of the lease providing for a forfeiture or by a notice to quit in accordance with law. Section 4 of the Sthan Niyantran Vidhan in no way interferes with those provisions. 1952 Madh B 121 (A I R V 39 P 5, 11) : I L R (1952) Madh B 126, Chhote Lal v. Abdullabhai.

The landlord will in addition to establishing his right to a decree for ejectment under the general law have to comply with the provisions of that Act.)

[Pt. 3aa] Where the landlord has already given notice for ejectment, since S. 4 f) of Sthan Niyantran Vidhan enables the landlord to evict the tenant on the ground of disclaimer or denial of the landlord's title, a fresh notice is not necessary. 1955 N U C (Madh B) 1814 (AIR V 42), Abdul Karim Mohorkhan v. Sugrabai.

[Pt. 3a] Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates (Control) Act (1947) — This Act does not affect the basic requirement of the Transfer of Property Act and before the suit for eviction can be instituted, the tenancy requires to be terminated in accordance with the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act. A repeal of Ss. 108 (j) and 111 cannot be implied from the provisions of the Bombay Act. 1953 Sau 113 (A I R V 40 C 59 P 14, 15) (DB), Karsandas Rimji v. Karsanji Kalyani. (1949 Mad 780 (AIR V 36 C 351); Krishnamurthy v. [Pt 4] Where the tenant admits by his written statement in a suit for ejectment that he was in arrears of three months' rent though he stated that the landlord had wrongfully refused to accept the rent which was tendered to him before the suit, it is the tenant's duty to deposit in Court the full rent due up to the date of written statement. The moment he admitted that there were arrears of rent, there was admittedly a forfeiture of tenancy and subject to the provision of S. 12 (2) and (3), Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging Rates Control Act as applied to Saurashtra the plaintiff prima facie becomes entitled to the decree for eviction. 1953 Sau 99 (AIR V 40 C 47 P 3) (DB), Jamna Bai Govindji v. Lallubhai Narsidas. (Held, that there was failure to comply with S. 12 (3) and the Court had no jurisdiction to refuse to pass decree for eviction.)

[Pt. 5] The C. P. and Berar House Rent Control Order does not require the landlord to state the grounds of determination of tenancy in the notice to be served on the tenant under S. 111, T. P Act. The House Rent Control Order imposes a condition of obtaining permission to determine a tenancy. There is no bar to the landlord giving notice under S. 111 (h), even if the permission is granted on the ground that the tenant denied the title of the landlord. *1946-52 I D 25006 (Nag), Mst. [Pt. 6] The expression 'lawfully determined' in S. 13 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950, means the determination of the contractual tenancy under S. 111 of the Transfer of Property Act as well as the withdrawal of the statutory protection afforded by S. 12 (1) of the Act. Both these elements must be present in order to constitute lawful determination of a tenancy within the meaning of S. 13 (2). 1955 Cal 226 (Pr 4) ((S) A I R V 42 C 57) (DB), Haralal Das v. Pasupati Charan Biswas.

[Pt. 3a] In the undermentioned case the Supreme Court held that the provisions of S. 111 (g) as to notice in writing as preliminary to a suit for ejectment based on forfeiture is not based on any principle of justice, equity or good conscience and cannot govern the leases made prior to the coming into force of the Act or prior to its amendment in 1929. Add after Pt. 2 :

[Pt. 2a] Thus, one of several joint lessors cannot determine the tenancy and a notice to quit must be given by all. The position of a joint landlord is not improved after partition. There is no severance of the tenancy by reason merely of such partition, and the landlord to whom a divided part of the reversion has been allotted acquires no right by reason merely of the partition to terminate the tenancy by giving notice to quit as to that part. ('50) 86 Cal L Jour 198 (213, 214), Sm. Durgarani Devi v. Mohiuddin.

Add after Pt. 3 as a separate para :

[Pt. 3a] If there is severance of the reversion and if the tenant recognises it or acknowledges the title of the owner of a severed part of the reversion, the notice to quit the severed part would be good and binding on the tenant. Such recognition may be either by express agreement, by attornment or other formal acknowledgment as by paying a nominal sum as rent or by submission to a distress. But an arrangement between the several cosharer landlords and the tenant that each cosharer landlord would be entitled to collect his share of rent separately would not amount to severance of the tenancy. Such an arrangement would be consistent with the continuation of the original lease of the entire tenure. It would not entitle the landlords to give separate notices to quit in respect of their respective shares of the reversion. ('50) 86 Cal L Jour 198 (214), Sm. Durgarani Debi v. Mohiuddin.

Page 1885 — In Note 1 line 4 after the words "or not" add Pt. 1a :

[Pt. 1a] The concept of waiver is in essence based on agreement of landlord to waive the forfeiture. Such agreement may be imported from any provision contained in the statute or may be by express conduct of the lessor from which an agreement will be implied as a necessary corollary to the act or conduct of the lessor. 1952 Cal 47 (A I R V 39 C 15 P 18), Talbot & Co. v. Haricharan.

Add after Pt. 6a :

[Pt. 6aa] A forfeiture can be waived only in the sense that the right to forfeit can be waived, that is to say, before the forfeiture has been actually effected or incurred. Once a lease has determined by forfeiture that is to say, once the landlord relying on the breach of a covenant entailing forfeiture has given a notice forfeiting the lease there can be no waiver of such forfeiture. S. 112 does not talk of such waiver and the landlord cannot, after such notice, set up the lease on its test again by any unilateral act of his own. 1955 NUC (Cal) 1100 (AIR V 42), Nemai Chand Sen v. Kumud Behari Basu.

Add after Pt. 7 as independent para :

[Pt. 8] Section 112 deals only with a forfeiture under S. 111, cl. (g) of the Transfer of Property Act. Obviously, the determination of the lease intended by the notice based on S. 6(8) of the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act (6 of 1933), is not a determination on any of the grounds mentioned in cl. (g) of S. 111, T. P. Act and hence S. 112 does not apply to such a case. 1955 NUC (Cal) 1100 (A I R V 42) Nemai, Chand Sen v. Kumud Bhari Basu.

But where rent is paid by tenant only to protect his rights under the Rent Control Act and produces those receipts they would not be sufficient to prove waiver.)

Add after Pt. 2c :

[Pt. 2cc] The question whether the act of the landlord (whether it is a receipt of amount sent as rent or without any statement at all) is one from which one can impute to the landlord the intention of creating a renewal of the tenancy or treating the tenancy as still subsisting is a question of fact. 1955 N U C (Sau) 971 (A I R V 42), Vanand Valji Nathu v. Vora Bhaijibhai Mulla Mamuji.

[Pt. 2d] Thus in the cases governed by the rent Acts, the acceptance of rent might be referable either to the fact that under the rent control law in force the tenant has become a statutory tenant or to the landlord's intention to treat the lease as subsisting. In such a case, the onus is upon the tenant to prove waiver of the notice to quit. For the tenant to succeed, such acceptance must be shown, aliunde, to be attributable only to the landlord's assenting to a new tenancy coming into existence. 1954 Cal 460 (Pr 15) (A I R V 41 C 156) (DB), Panchanan Ghose v. Haridas Banerjee.

Add After Pt. 7 :

[Pt. 7a] So also where pending the suit for ejectment and damages for use and occupation the defendant made certain payments without insisting upon the withdrawal of the suit the plaintiff was held not to have waived the rights asserted by him in the suit by the acceptance of that payment. 1953 Nag 219 (AIR V 40 C 84 P 12) : I L R (1954) Nag 147, Ilahibux v. Munir Khan.

Add after Pt. 10 as separate para :

[Pt. 10a] In the undermentioned case, it was held by the Punjab High Court that where a notice to quit has been given, a subsequent notice to quit is of no effect unless it can be inferred from other circumstances that a new tenancy has been created after the expiry of the first notice; nor does it amount to a waiver of the first notice in the absence of any proof thereof. 1953 Punj 243 (A I R V 40 C 101 P 7): I L R (1954) Punj 149 (DB), Basheshar Nath Sarin v. Delhi Improvement Trust. ((1947) 1 All E R 116, Loewenthal v. Vanthoute, Rel. on.)

Add after Pt. 13 :

[Pt. 13a] Where a landlord institutes a proceeding for fixing standard rent before the Rent Controller before the date of the notice of ejectment and continues it after the notice and during the hearing of the suit for ejectment, he cannot be said to have waived the notice 1950 Cal 515 (AIR V 37 C 193 P 3, 4), S. K. Chaudhury v. Joy Kumar Sarkar✣1952 Cal 130 (AIR V 39 C 51 P 21): I L R (1952) 2 Cal 138, Joy Kumar Sarkar v. S. K. Chaudhury.

[But see 1950 Mad 60 (A I R V 37 C 36 P 4), Sunkavally v. Singaruju Malaparaju. (Suit for ejection cannot be prosecuted further where on the pending application of the landlord fair rent is fixed.)]

In such a case S. 114 will not be attracted.)

[Pt. 4b] The provisions of the section cannot be given effect to so as to override the express provisions contained in a special statute, such as S. 8 (2), Mysore House Rent Control Order. ('47) 52 Mys H C R 455 (481) (D B), Gururajachar v. Rangiah.

SECTION 114A

Add after Pt. 5c :

[Pt. 6] Where all the conditions of S. 114A are satisfied and the lessee fails to remedy the breach which was capable of remedy, no relief against forfeiture can be granted to the lessee. 1953 Cal 536 (AIR V 40 C 202 P 43), Charusila Dassi v. Madan Theatres, Ltd.

Note 2

Add after Pt. 1 :

[Pt. 2] The Madras High Court also in a recent case has taken the same view. 1953 Mad 313 (A I R V 40 C 106 P 7) : I L R (1953) Mad 615 (DB), Mrs. Margaret Jean Massy v. Colonel Granville Alric Richard Spain.

Add as separate para :

[Pt. 3] The right to institute a suit for ejectment accrues only after the requirements of S. 114-A have been complied with. The section requires that the plaintiff should allege in the plaint that their requirements of the section have been complied with. Where there is no evidence to show that the lease had been validly determined by notice as required by S. 114-A the suit cannot be decreed. 1954 All 649 (Prs 5, 6) (A I R V 41 C 255), Asghar v. U. P. Government.

Add in the Foot Note indicated :

1. 1953 Mad 313 (A I R V 40 C 106 P 8): I L R (1953) Mad 615 (DB), Margaret Jean Massy v. Colonel Granville Alric Richard Spain. (Technical defects in notice will not prevent lessor from availing himself of the right of forfeiture where the notice substantially complies with the section in that there is clear information to the lessee as regards the breaches complained so as to give him an opportunity to remedy them.)

SECTION 115

Add in the Foot Notes indicated :

2. 1953 Mad 356 (A I R V 40 C 122 P 5) (DB), Devaraja Bhatt v. Raja, V. S. ✠ 1950 Madh B 19 (A I R V 37 C 10 P 4) (DB), Shankarrao v. Kisanlal. (Decree for ejectment against lessee and his sub-lessee — Decree becoming final as against lessee — Sub-lessee would be bound by the decree on the principles of second part of S. 115.)

3. 1952 Cal 196 (A I R V 39 C 73 P 15) : I L R (1952) 2 Cal 167 (DB), Mahammad Ibrahim v. Bani Modhab. (Such a surrender operates as an assignment to the lessor of the lessee's interest and thus brings the underlessee into immediate relation with the lessor.)

Note 3

Add in the Foot Note indicated :

1b. 1953 Mad 356 (A I R V 40 C 122 P 5) (DB), Devaraja Bhatt v. Raja, V. S.

SECTION 116

Note 1

Add in the Foot Notes indicated :

1. 1950 All 583 (A I R V 37 C 228 P 6) : I L R (1952) 1 All 85 (DB), Raman Lal v. Bhagwan Das. (When the lease has not been determined and the possession continues in accordance with the terms of the lease, the question of holding over does not arise)

6. 1954 All 475 (Pr 11) (A I R V41 C 197) (DB), Sheo Dulare v. Anant Ram ✠ 1950 East Punj 175 (A I R V 37 C 34 P 22), Thakar Dass v. Custodian, E. P. (Lessee before determination of lease by efflux of time applying to Custodian under S. 5A, East Punjab Evacuees (Administration of Property) Act, 1947—Custodian assenting to continuance in possession — There is renewal of lease.)

7. [See also 1954 All 475 (Pr 13) (A I R V 41 C 197) (DB), Skeo Dulare v. Anant Ram. (No fresh tenancy after termination of tenancy seems to arise in England unless both parties agree.)

Add after Pt. 7a.

[Pt. 7b] Where the relationship of landlord and tenant has ceased between the parties after the expiry of lease there could not have been any holding over after the service of two notices on the lessees which fact has been admitted by the lessees. 1955 N U C (Madh B) 52 (A I R V 42), Santsaran v. Bankelal Ramlal. (Lease expired by efflux of time— Notices to quit served on tenants — Tenants admitting service — No relationship of landlord and tenant—Doctrine of holding over does not apply.)

Add after Pt. 8 :

[Pt. 8aa] It was held by the Supreme Court in the undermentioned case that the statement in Brahmayya v. Sundaramma, 1948 Mad 275 (A I R V 35 C 140) : I L R (1948) Mad 757 (FB) that Ss. 105 to 116 are founded upon the principle of reason and equity could not be accepted either as correct or precise. [Pt. 8b] It was further held by the Assam High Court that even if the principle behind S. 116 is allowed to operate in the case of an agricultural lease, a strict

[Pt. 6] It has been held in the undermentioned case that when a person holds over, after an unregistered lease of a shop for manufacturing purpose for one year, which fixes only monthly rent, the holding over cannot be from year to year as that would amount to negativing the provisions of S. 107 and that the tenancy must be held to be from month to month, so far as the period of holding over is concerned. 1952 All 634 (AIR V 39 C 123 P 4, 5), Kishanlal v. Lal Ram Chander.

It is submitted that a lease by holding over under S. 116 though it may be from year to year does not require any registration. There seems no question of negativing the provisions of S. 107 as the section does not apply to leases by holding over. But the actual decision may perhaps be justified on the ground that the provision for monthly rent is an "agreement to contrary" within the meaning of S. 116.

[Pt. 7] A executed a kabuliyat by which he agreed to take settlement of the land for agricultural and residential purposes for a term of one year as a non-occupancy tenant on Rs. 10 as its annual paikast rent payable on the first Pous of the year. A further agreed in express terms that he shall vacate the land without any notice on the expiry of the term of settlement and would be liable to punishment as a trespasser if he failed to comply. A continued in possession after the expiry of the first year by paying rent to the landlord plaintiff. After the expiry of the second year the plaintiff gave a 15 days' notice to quit and on failure to comply sued for ejectment it was held that as the contract was renewed by conduct of the parties without any kind of qualification the condition requiring the tenant to vacate without notice was part of the renewed lease and it operated as a contract to the contrary within S. 116. The renewal was only for a year and not from year to year and no notice of ejectment was necessary. 1954 Assam 102 (Pr 10) (AIR V 41 C 37) : ILR (1954) 6 Assam 95 (DB), Sajid Mia Majumdar v. Abdul Sattar Gani.

Add after Pt. 6 :

[Pt. 7] A letter did not show that the writer of it, namely, an insurance agent, was transferring his interest in the commission to the chief agent; it was not addressed to the chief agent at all but it was just an order to the Branch Manager of the Company to pay the commission due to the insurance agent to the chief agent. It was held that the letter was not an assignment of the commission due to the insurance agent but was merely a pay order which could be cancelled by the agent. 1954 Orissa 44 (AIR V 41 C 13 P 15): ILR (1953) Cut 630 (DB), Balaram Panda v. Gopinath Misra.

Add after Pt. 7 :

[Pt. 8] A, a bank, started an overdraft account in B's name in order to finance B in carrying out certain military contracts. B executed a power-of-attorney in A's favour, authorising A to collect all bills and to receive all payments in respect of the contract and to act on behalf of B, who undertook to ratify and confirm those acts. A copy of the power of-attorney was sent to and was duly noticed by the military authorities. On finding that certain amount due under a bill on which B had obtained overdraft facility, was paid directly to B, in spite of the repeated demands for it by A, A sued both B and the Union of India for its recovery. A claimed that a charge was created with respect to the bills under S. 130, T. P. Act, in favour of the holder of the power-of-attorney who became an assignee and the Government, as a debtor was bound to pay to A, the assingee, after the express notice. It was held that no charge was created or assignment made in favour of the bank with respect to the bill or bills and there was therefore no legal obligation on the part of the military authorities or the Government to pay up the sum covered by the bill once again to the Bank simply because it held a power-of-attorney. 1954 Assam 23 (AIR V 41 C 5 P 9, 13): ILR (1953) 5 Assam 115 (DB), Union of India v. Bank of the East, Ltd.

Add after Pt. 15 as a separate para :

[Pt. 15a] Where after an assignment of a debt by the heirs of the deceased creditor and notice of assignment by the assignee to the debtor, the debtor advised the rival claimants to obtain a succession certificate and thereupon the assignors obtained a succession certificate and recovered the debt from the debtor by virtue of the certificate, it was held that the debtor obtained a valid discharge of the debt. 1950 Kutch 49 (A I R V 37 C 38 P 4), Keshavji Lakhamshey v. Nanji Devji.

Note 19

Add after pt. 4 as a separate para :

[Pt. 4a] In cases of transfer of book debts or property coming within the definition of actionable claim pending a suit for its recovery there is necessarily involved also a transfer of the transferor's right in a decree which may be passed in his favour in the pending litigation and the moment a decree is passed in his favour by the court of law, that decree is also automatically transferred in favour of the transferee by virtue of the assignment in writing already executed by the transferor. The debt is merged in the decree and the transferee of the actionable claim becomes entitled by virtue of the assignment in writing in his favour not only to the book debt but also to the decree in which it has merged. The transferee can therefore claim to execute the decree under O. 21, R. 16 of the C. P. Code.. 1955 S C 376 (Pr 56) ((S) AIR V 42 C 66) (SC), Jugalkishore Saraf v. *Raw Cotton Co. [Pt. 6c] Similarly a railway receipt being a mercantile document of title to goods, it is possible to transfer the title in the goods, to the endorsee by mere endorsement. The presumption is in favour of the endorsee though from other facts and circumstances it may be possible to hold that the goods have not been transferred to the endorsee and he is merely deputed to act as agent.

In a suit by the plaintiff to recover value for shortage of goods delivered to him by the railway, it was admitted that the goods belonged to the consignor, that the consignor had merely authorised the plaintiff by endorsement to him of the railway receipt to take delivery of the goods and that the goods were kept at the shop of the plaintiff for the purpose of sale as an agent of the consignor.

Consignor merely authorising the plaintiff by endorsing railway receipt to him to take delivery and to keep them in his shop for sale on commission — Held, that the plaintiff's right being only to get a share in the sale proceeds by way of commission, he was not entitled to sue railway for value of shortage in delivery. 1954 All 747 (Pr 11, 13) (A I R V 41 C 296) (DB), Sheo Prasad v. Dominion of India.

Overlooking of Precedents leads to Erroneous Decisions

"Ignorance of the Judge is the misfortune of the innocent." Latin Maxim.

1953 S. C. 478 (Pr. 20) (AIR V 40 C 118)— "It cannot be disputed that the High Court, even though it was hearing an appeal from an order of acquittal, had full powers to review the entire evidence on the record and reach its own conclusion that the acquittal order should be set aside. But, as the Privy Council pointed out in Sheoswarup v. Emperor, 1934 P. C. 227 (2) (AIR V 21) in exercising these powers the High Court should and will always give proper weight and consideration to such matters as : . . . . . The High Court, in our opinion, did not clearly keep before it these rules and principles well known and recognised in the administration of criminal justice."

1953 S. C. 473 (Pr. 7) (AIR V 40 C 116) — "It is unfortunate that the last mentioned case (i. e. (1949) 29 Tax Cas 395) was not brought to the notice of the High Court before the judgment under appeal was delivered."

1952 S. C. 358 (361) (Pr. 12) (AIR V 39) — "This decision (Md. Keramuttullah Miah v. Keamutulla, 1919 Cal. 218) (AIR V 6) was reached on 19-7-1918, i. e. almost 5 months after the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council (in 1918 P. C. 11 (AIR V 5)), but it does not appear that the ruling was brought to the notice of the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court."

1953 S. C. 459 Pr. (10) (AIR V 40 C 111) —"It seems to us that the attention of the High Court was not drawn to this Court's decision in Surajpal Singh's case (1952 S. C. 52 (AIR V 39)) wherein it was pointed out that . . . . compelling reasons."

1943 Privy Council 189 (191) AIR V 30) — In an appeal from Allahabad the question for decision involved was as to the inherent power of the Court to grant restitution to the successful defendant. Their Lordships observed: "The decision of the Board in 1919 P. C. 55 (AIR V 6) was not cited in either of the Courts in India . . . . The application now before the Board . . . . invoked the powers of the learned Subordinate Judge to assess the sum due by way of restitution . . . . by the method laid down in 1919 P. C. 55 (AIR V 6), . . . For this purpose the case must go back to the Court of the Subordinate Judge. . . ."

1922 Privy Council 11 (13) (AIR V 9) — Section 89, T. P. Act, 1882, ended after providing for the decree "and thereafter the defendants' right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished." These words do not occur in either the foreclosure section of the Act of 1882 or the corresponding rule of O. 34, Civil P. C.

"The difficulty which had arisen as to these words in several cases, e.g., Vanmikalinga v. Chidambara, (1905) I. L. R. 29 Mad. 37 — which case, it may be mentioned, does not seem to have been brought to the notice of the Board in Het Ram's case, 1918 P. C. 34 (AIR V 5) —therefore no longer arises."

1956 All. 338 (Pr. 22) (FB) (AIR V 43 C 125)—"A learned single Judge of this Court held in Chunna Lal v. Governor-General in Council, 1950 ALL. 89 (A I R V 37 C 30) that if the consignor could establish that the consignee was merely a commission agent he could sue. It seems that the earlier cases of various High Courts were not placed before the learned Judge except for one case of the Madras High Court which he distinguished."

1954 All. 557 (Pr. 7) (A. I. R. V. 41 C. 192)—"No doubt, a contrary view was expressed by single Judge of this Court in Damodar Swarup v. State, Cri. Ref. No. 267 of 1951 decided by Brij Mohan Lal J. on 4-12-1951 (ALL.) but obviously his attention was not invited to these and other cases previously decided by this Court."

1955 Andhra 112 (Pr. 9) ((S) A. I. R. V 42 C. 41) — "A careful perusal of that judgment (1954.2 M. L. J. 707) shows that none of the cases cited before me were placed before the learned Judge, who states at p. 708 of the report as follows: I have no doubt that, if the learned Judge's attention had been drawn to the Bench decision of the Madras High Court in Narayayyan v. Nageswarayyan, ((1894) 17 Mad. 389), the learned Judge would have followed it and come to a different conclusion."

Side pp. 1956 (4 pp.)

1955 Andhra 49 (Pr. 27) ((S) A. I. R. V. 42 C. 21) — "I am really surprised that the Courts below summarily dealt with the question of estoppel and regarded the matter so simple that they did not even refer to the decision of the Privy Council or the Full Benches of the Allahabad, Bombay and Madras High Courts or even the passages from the leading Text books. I wish to condemn the practice of the Subordinate Judiciary in not referring to the decisions which are binding upon them. By a casual reference to the leading text books, the courts below should have discovered that the Full Bench case in 1929 Mad. 502 (AIR V 16) has at least an important bearing in deciding the question of estoppel. It is the bounden duty of the members of the bar and the Judges who administer the law to keep themselves informed of the march and progress of law, i.e. statutory and case law. If every illiterate man is presumed to know law and ignorance of law is no excuse, it is all the more important that those who are concerned in the administration of law, namely the members of the Bar and the Judges should read the law Reports regularly and be aware not only of the latest reports, but also decisions of the Supreme Court and the High Courts."

1955 Bom. 227 (Pr. 6) ((S) A. I. R. V. 42 C. 57)—"With very great respect to the Federal Court, Mr. Justice Kania completely overlooked the judgment of the Bombay High Court (in 1945 Bom. 315 (AIR V 32)) to which reference has been made and to which he was a party."

1954 Bom. 273 (Pr. 11) (A. I. R. V. 41 C. 78)—"It does not appear to have been brought to the notice of the learned Judges (in 1951 Pun. 324 (A. I. R. V. 38 C 79)) that the view which they were taking was opposed to the consensus of judicial opinion amongst the other Indian High Courts."

1954 Cal. 412 (Pr. 9) (A. I. R. V. 41 C. 141) — "Unfortunately the earlier decision in the case of 11 Cal. L. J. 87 was not brought to the notice of the learned Judges in Afazuddi's case, (39 Cal. 133) with the result that the expression 'Projabili' was held to include the creation of a tenure in the latter case, while the decision in the former case was to the contrary."

1955 Hyd. 28 (Pr. 15) ((S) A. I. R. V. 42 C. 7) (F. B.) — "After carefully considering the views expressed in the aforesaid two sets of authorities reported in the Urdu Law Reports, one thing is clear that the first set of rulings followed the line taken by the former British Indian High Courts and that a Full Bench of the pre-constitution High Court of the State has also expressed similar view in 9 Ain-e-Deccan 530 (Q); as against this the later set of cases so far as the Abkari Act is concerned are decisions by Division Benches, which did not consider the Full Bench ruling referred to above which was evidently not brought to their Lordships' notice."

1955 Mad. 78 (Pr. 5) ((S) A. I. R. V. 42 C. 21)—"But neither of the decisions of the Privy Council, viz., 22 All. 149 (P. C.) and 1924 P. C. 226 (AIR V 11) appear to have been placed before the learned Judges (in 1925 Bom. 501 (AIR V 12)) and if the learned Judges had before them the principle governing such cases as laid down by the Privy Council, it was not likely that they would have taken a strict and narrow view of the scope of the Proviso 6 to S. 92, Evidence Act."

1955 Mad. 341 (Pr. 6) ((S) A. I. R. V. 42 C. 92) (F. B.) — "The Full Bench in 1936 Mad. 324 (AIR V 23) which till then governed the practice on the original side of this Court, does not appear to have been placed before the learned Judge, in (1953 Mad. 858 (AIR V 40 C 335)) as it should have been by the learned Advocates on the original side who appeared in that case."

1954 Mad. 788 (Pr. 23) (A. I. R. V. 41 C. 260) (F. B.)—"Before leaving this case, we have to point out, that had the learned Advocate for the respondent, when the case was referred to the Full Bench, brought to our notice, the cases which he cited before the Full Bench, we might not have referred the matter to the Full Bench and therefore the remarks by the Full Bench "therefore a reference to the Full Bench was not strictly necessary" would not have been made. Before us only two decisions were cited and the learned Advocates on either side suggested a reference to a Full Bench."

C.] "A large number of cases have been collected in Edn. 4 of Chitaley & Rao's Code of Civil Procedure (vol 1) which only serve to show that the High Courts have not always appreciated the limits of the jurisdiction conferred by this section."

1949 P. C. 156 (158) (A. I. R. V. 36. C 47)— Sir John Beaumont.—"There have been no doubt, decisions in some High Courts in India which lend support to the view upon which the Judges acted. The cases are collected in Edn. 4 of Chitaley and Rao on the Code of Civil Procedure Vol. I, page 1105."

I. R. Commentaries, Code of Civil Procedure (4th Edition, 1944) at page 1755 states: 'But a person who is not a party though he may be interested in the suit is not entitled to apply under this rule' . . . . Agreeing with the views expressed above, I am of the opinion that section 127, Civil Procedure Code, is not available to a person who is not a party to the suit . . . ."

1955 J. & K. 1 (Pr. 5) ((S) A. I. R. V. 42 C. 1), Shahmiri J.—"As stated in Chitaley's Code of Criminal Procedure (1950) Edition) a valid divorce of the wife by the husband where it is sanctioned by personal law, puts an end to the marital relation and the status of husband and wife, and no order for maintenance can be made subsequent to the date of such divorce."

1955 Mad. 100 (Pr. 16) ((S) A. I. R. V. 42, C 28), Ramaswami J.—"The most exhaustive, lucid and analytical commentary on Art. 14 is to be found in the recently published A.I.R. Commentaries on the Constitution of India, Vol. 1 pp. 202-295. I am greatly indebted to this monumental work in the preparation of this decision. It is now well settled as these learned commentators of what may legitimately be described as the Indian Willoughby that this conception does not involve the idea of absolute equality among human beings which is a physical impossibility."

1955 Mad. 350 (Pr. 31) ((S) A. I. R. V. Chitaley 1954 Edn. Vol. 2 pp. 1799-1800."

1956 Sau. 54 (56) (Pr. 3) (A I R V 43 C 18) — Shah C. J. — "The question has been considered in a lucid and exhaustive note in the Constitution of India by Chitaley and Rao Vol. 1 (N. 2 at pp. 183-185) which is in accord with the view of Chagla C. J. and we are in agreement with this view."

1956 Trav.-Co. 127 (Pr 12) (A I R V 43 C 52)—Varadaraja Iyengar J.—"The error may be one of fact but is not limited to matters of fact and include also errors of law. But the law must be definite and capable of ascertainment. An erroneous view of law on a debatable point or a wrong exposition of the law or a wrong application of the law or a failure to apply the appropriate law cannot be considered a mistake or error apparent on the face of the record. See Chitaley's C. P. C. Vol. III, pp. 3549-50, 5th Edn."
